Predict Defeat For Tobey Plan Asking Split in Neutrality Bill

Opponents Say Vote
Won't be Test on Repeal Issue

AWAIT BALLOT

Backers of Measure See Ultimate Victory in Upper House

Washington — (P) — Both sides in the senate neutrality fight today forecast defeat of the Tobey proposal to defer action on arms embargo until a "cash and carry" system of wartime trade is adopted.

Opponents of the administration's neutrality bill declared, however, the vote would not represent an accurate test of strength on the repeal issue. Balloting was expected late this afternoon or tomorrow.

Senator Tobey (R-N. H.) argued that since there was little opposition to the basic idea of banning American ships and citizens from the European war zone, those restrictions in the pending measure should be written into law immediately.

Against Splitting Bill
Administration forces objected to splitting up their bill as Tobey proposed. They expressed certainty of ultimate victory for repeal by a sizable margin, and predicted debate would not last much more than another week.

The latter estimate was challenged by Senator Nye (R-N. D.), one of the anti-repeal leaders, who said at least twenty more senators intended to speak against the measure.

Senator Borah (R-Idaho), who opened the opposition case last week, was described as believing that little could be gained by a long list of speeches. He made it plain, though, that he was depending on a revival of national interest to bolster the opposition case when a final vote is approached.

The flood of mail which swamped senators' office staffs last month has fallen off to a dribble.

Recess Move Fails
The senate leadership blocked temporarily today an effort by Senator Johnson (D-Colo.) to recess the chamber to give President Roosevelt a free hand to work for European peace.

Johnson told the chamber that "the whole world would be gratified" if the senate would recess for three days. This, he said, would be considered a sign that the United States wanted peace in Europe and that the people were counting on the chief executive to do what he could to effect it.

"We must accept the belief that Germany will listen," Johnson told the senate. "They know how the president stands. When they call him in they must be seeking an honorable peace."

The Colorado senator cited press reports of Germany's willingness to have Mr. Roosevelt act as a negotiator for peace.

When Johnson concluded, Majority Leader Barkley (D-Ky.) urged that the recess motion be withdrawn. He said that Senator Downey (D-Calif.) had expected to have the floor for a continuation of his address against the administration neutrality bill.

Johnson withdrew his motion, but served notice he would renew it after Downey had completed.

Meanwhile, Representative Woodrum (D-Va.) proposed a congressional investigation of the "purposes and activities" of an unofficial "national committee to keep America out of foreign wars," headed by Representative Fish (R-N. Y.).

In a resolution offered in the house, Woodrum proposed appointment of a special seven-man committee to investigate the group which he said had been soliciting.

FEARS WAR

Clinton, Mass. — (P) — United States Senator David I. Walsh (D-Mass.), a leader in the fight for retention of the embargo on exports of munitions to warring nations, declared in an interview today that the odds were "ten to one" that the United States would be drawn into the European war.

Chrysler Closes Dodge Division in Labor Controversy

Sends 10,000 Workers
Home: Union Employees
Accused of 'Slow-Down'

Detroit — (P) — The Chrysler Corporation closed its Dodge division 20 minutes after the start of operations today and sent 10,000 workers home.

Herman L. Weckler, vice president in charge of Chrysler operations, said union employees had started a "slow down" strike after the management had refused to re-hire 64 employees dismissed last week.

The Dodge management said the 3:30 p.m. shift would go to work as usual and that operations on later shifts would be continued if there were no slowdown. Weckler said both the dismissals Friday and the shutdown today were brought about by employees allowing automobiles on the final assembly line to go past untouched.

Refused Reinstatement
CIO United Automobile Workers officials refused to recognize the dismissals and ordered the men to report for work as usual this morning. When the management refused to reinstate them, a corporation spokesman said, unionists began a 50 per cent slowdown.

Today's halt in operations followed an exchange of accusations during the weekend between the company and the union.

The union charged the company with a production speed-up and unsatisfactory wage scales, while Weckler, in a statement, accused the union of resorting to "a new form of sit-down" which he described as "obviously a demonstration of power to compel concessions in the contract negotiations soon to be entered into."

Grand Jury Legal, Court Decision

Judge Refuses to Hear
Arguments on Ice Cream
Industry Indictment

Chicago — (P) — Federal Judge Philip J. Sullivan ruled today that the federal grand jury which indicted 40 individuals and corporations for conspiracy to restrain trade in the ice cream industry was a legally constituted body.

Defense counsel had claimed the life of the jury had been continued illegally from the July term of 1938 to the September and October terms.

Judge Sullivan also announced he would not hear defense arguments on a motion to disregard certain portions of the indictment as "im pertinent and immaterial" surplusage.

Likewise, the court refused to rule on the defense contention that congress had removed the jurisdiction of farm products from the jurisdiction of the Sherman anti-trust act, under which the indictment was returned, and had placed control in the hands of the secretary of agriculture. Judge Sullivan pointed out this question was before the supreme court in the companion milk case and would be decided soon.

The court expressed willingness to hear arguments on the question of venue. In their motions to quash the indictment, defending lawyers claimed this district had no jurisdiction in the case.

Witness Says Two 'Board
Secretaries' are Members

Delavan Man Tells Probers Reds Told to Join
Other Organizations

Washington — (P) — Kenneth Goff of Delavan, Wis., told the Dies committee today that two "national board secretaries" of the Y.W.C.A. were members of the Young Communist league and had attended the national training school of the Communist party.

Goff, who testified he was a member of the national committee of the league and also a party member, said the officials were Rose Troiano and Rose Terlin, both of New York.

He named them as examples of young Communist members who, he asserted, were prominent in other organizations. Goff told the committee he was resigning from the league and the Communist party at the conclusion of his testimony because he believed they were un-American.

"A Y.C.L. worker is no good to the Y.C.L. unless he has membership in other organizations," Goff asserted.

He said that league members did most of their work in other organizations, many of which were non-Communist, while others were openly opposed to communism.

Joined Townsend Move
Goff testified that he was assigned by Y.C.L. leaders in Wisconsin to "boycott" the Townsend pension plan youth movement. He was so successful, he said, smiling, that he became state secretary of the Townsend youth group and was elected to the Townsend national convention at Cleveland in 1936.

Celeste Strack of New York, whom he described as the "beautiful go-getter" of the Y.C.L. also was a delegate at Cleveland.

League members, Goff testified, were elected delegates to the National Youth Congress by church groups and other organizations he described as "fronts." He said that a Bill Hinkley represented the Christ Episcopal church of Missouri.

Anti-Trust Trial Opens in Indiana

Case Involves General Motors and Its Finance Companies

South Bend, Ind. — (P) — The anti-trust trial of the General Motors Corporation and affiliates — legal test of sales finance methods allegedly used by big automobile manufacturers — was scheduled to start today in federal district court here.

Defendants with the motor firm were its finance companies, the General Motors Sales Corporation and the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and 12 officials, notably Board Chairman Alfred P. Sloan, Jr. and President William S. Knudsen.

Interested onlookers were others of the Detroit automotive "big three" — the Ford Motor company and the Chrysler Corporation. The extent of their freedom to promote their own finance companies hinged upon the outcome of the trial.

As long as the American war-93 companies, eight affiliates and 30 individuals here May 27, 1938.

Three almost identical indictments charged that they plotted to set up a monopoly, in violation of the Sherman act, by forcing dealers to finance sales through the manufacturers' own credit firms. This action, the indictments held, did "irreparable damage" to small finance companies.

Later the Ford and Chrysler defendants entered consent decrees admitting the practices charged and agreeing to stop them in return for a suspension of the prosecution.

Leading U. S. Economists See Good Business Prospects for Nation, A.P. Survey Reveals

New York — (P) — The United States is entering a period of good business recovery, leading economists said today.

This business upturn is due to domestic economic conditions and the European war, most of them said.

Early peace in Europe probably would bring a temporary recession to American business, most also agreed.

NEW SENATOR

Frankfort, Ky. — (P) — Governor A. R. "Happy" Chandler (above) resigned today and was succeeded by Lieutenant Governor Keen Johnson, who immediately appointed Chandler to the United States senate, succeeding the late M. M. Logan.

In brief ceremonies in the governor's private office, Chandler, whose gubernatorial term would have expired Dec. 12, signed his resignation.

A few minutes later Johnson, who is the Democratic nominee for governor in the November general election, was sworn in as governor by Chief Justice Alex Raloff of the Kentucky Court of Appeals.

The new junior senator from Kentucky plans to leave Frankfort tonight for Washington and probably will present himself to the senate tomorrow.

Union Turns Down Governor's Offer To be Mediator

Negotiations are Resumed
In Nash Motors
Strike at Kenosha

Kenosha — (P) — Negotiations were resumed today seeking settlement of the week-old Nash Motors strike after leaders of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) union rejected "for the time being" the proffered services of Governor Julius H. Hall as mediator.

"We have every respect for the governor's office but feel that we would rather do our own negotiating without the governor's participation," William Cody of Milwaukee, regional U. A. W. director, asserted.

He said this also was the opinion of the Kenosha local, which participated in a series of conferences with officials of the Nash-Kelvinator Corporation plant here last week in an effort to settle the strike.

Informed his mediator offer was interpreted in some quarters as the forerunner of an attempt at a back-to-work movement. Hall said he would attend a company-union mediation conference at 2 p. m. today to clarify his position and renew the offer of his services as mediator.

He had asserted there were only "one or two" disagreements between the company and union and that the strike "ought to be settled" soon.

"Mass Observation"
George Nordstrom, local president, announced there would be no back-to-work movement and ordered all workers to stage a peaceful "mass observation" at the gates of the plant for one hour Tuesday morning, beginning at 6 o'clock.

The governor came here yesterday with Henry C. Fulda, director of the state labor relations board and conferred with company officials and union executives. Further negotiations were called for 9 a. m. today.

"They only disagreed on one or two points," Hall announced, "and they ought to settle this strike right away. I know that both sides want to be fair and I see no reason why the men can't get back to work Monday morning."

He said $250,000 in pay rolls was lost last week in Kenosha and Milwaukee, where the Samantonia-vaque, where the Seaman Body plant is tied up because of the strike. About 6,100 have been made idle by the union's demand for a formal contract rather than a working agreement.

One Seaman Lost as $200,000 Yacht Is Destroyed by Fire

New York — (P) — Searchers gave up hope today of finding alive a crew member lost when the $200,000 ultra-modern yacht Q. E. D., owned and planned by airplane designer Anthony Fokker, burned and sank in the Hudson river off Yonkers.

Nine crew members and Mr. and Mrs. Richard G. Vance of Westfield, N. J., to whom Fokker had loaned the boat for a honeymoon cruise to Niagara Falls, leaped into the river as flames swept the 110-foot stream-lined vessel early Sunday.

The missing seaman, John Wana-maker, father of two children, disappeared after calling for help. The other crew members were picked up quickly by river craft.

Clad only in night clothes, Vance and his bride of six hours, the former Paula Borchard, paddled to shore in a rubber boat tossed from the blazing yacht by a seaman.

The rescued crew members, who suffered minor burns, said the fire apparently started from a fireplace in the suite occupied by the Vances.

Britain and France In Accord on Aims; Soviet Urges Peace

Moscow Paper Says Allies
'Returning to Mid-

TRADE AGREEMENT

Russia Trying to Strengthen
Position in All Directions

Moscow — (P) — Soviet Russia threw her weight behind Adolf Hitler's peace gestures today in an editorial in the government newspaper Izvestia, accusing Great Britain and France of "returning to the middle ages" for waging war to "exterminate Hitlerism."

At the same time, it was announced Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov had reached a quick decision last night with leaders of a German trade delegation.

The delegation arrived only yesterday to expedite stimulated trade between Russia and Germany under the recent formal trade and credit agreement between the Nazi-Communist partners.

Besides the German delegation, Russia was host to the foreign ministers of Turkey and Lithuania and expected a third diplomat, former Premier Juho Kusti Paasikivi of Finland tonight or tomorrow as she pushed forward her bargain-driving campaign on Russian frontiers from the gulf of Finland to the Black sea.

Can't "Exterminate Idea"
Izvestia asserted British-French arguments that the war must be prolonged to crush Hitlerism "makes us return to the gloomy middle ages when devastating religious wars were carried on for the purpose of the extermination of heretics and people of different religions."

"It is impossible," the newspaper declared, "to exterminate any idea or any opinion by fire and sword."

Diplomatic observers said Russia, partner with Germany in eastern Europe, apparently was striving to strengthen her position in all possible directions while Europe's other major powers were occupied with war.

Interest centered on the impending Finnish negotiations. Like Estonia and Latvia, which already have granted Russia important concessions.

Nazis Confident
Peace Efforts to Be Started Soon

Looking Toward Presi- dent Roosevelt for Mediation Move

Berlin — (P) — Germany waited confidently today for the peace many of her millions believed just around the corner.

Nazis cited two reasons for their optimism that the end of Polish resistance in the east forecast an end to European hostilities.

First, they said, Adolf Hitler's hand was open to anyone who would clasp it in peace.

Second, they looked toward President Roosevelt for mediation.

Nazi reports have emphasized that proponents and opponents of revision of the United States neutrality act have expressed favor of Mr. Roosevelt in the role of peace-maker for Europe.

Nazi officials have stressed Hitler's readiness to accept a peace initiative from the United States president, and the press has been filled with accounts of "the deep and favorable impression" left throughout the world by the fuhrer's address to the reichstag Friday.

Quiet Weekend
With no official answer yet from Great Britain or France, however, and army communiques still reporting only minor activity on the western front, German officialdom enjoyed its first weekend of leisure in five weeks.

The fuhrer, who has spent much time in travel, particularly on the eastern front, since German forces invaded Poland Sept. 1, still was in Berlin.

The army command's communique of yesterday's activities indicated a lull in the west, but said German forces in the east were continuing to march toward the new German-Russian border in conquered Poland.

It reported only "local scouting and troop activity," "minor artillery fire on both sides" and "only little scouting plane activity" in the west.

HITLER SCORED

Newspapers Assail Hitler's Proposals as 'Nebulous'

London — (P) — Repeated encounters between British warships and German planes in the northeast areas of the North sea were reported by the admiralty to have occurred today. The admiralty announcement declared the British had suffered no casualties, but that they did not know how the Germans had fared.

London — (P) — Prime Minister Chamberlain told the house of commons today that Britain and France were "in complete accord" as to the purpose of their participation in the European war, which they frequently expressed, and that any more specific statement of their war aims would be evolved through consultation of the two powers.

Chamberlain's statement was in reply to a question by a laborite, Arthur Henderson, who asked "whether it is the policy of his majesty's government to publish in the course of time and jointly with the French government a specific statement of war aims based on principles already enunciated."

"His majesty's government and the French government are in complete accord as to the purposes for which they entered the war," Chamberlain replied.

"These purposes have more than once been stated by both governments," he added. "No doubt as time goes on both governments will consider whether their war aims should be stated in more specific form."

Agreement Necessary
Chamberlain said that any such statement "will only be made by agreement between the two governments."

The British government has said repeatedly that the principal aims of the war are to "crush Hitlerism" and "to free Europe from the menace of aggression." The restoration of Poland and Czechoslovakia also has been mentioned.

Eleanor Rathbone, independent, interposed in the discussion to inquire whether "the prime minister is aware there is a strong and growing demand in the country for a more specific statement on the government's war aims?"

There were several cries of "No." Chamberlain gave no answer.

While the nation waited for the cabinet to frame a formal reply to Adolf Hitler's peace gestures, British kept her war preparations geared to a high pitch.

The British press continued to assail Hitler's proposals as "nebulous" and urge a policy barring peace "at the price of Poland."

Cite Attitude in U. S.
Widely-separated spheres of thought emphasized reported United States reaction as a strong argument against embracing the fuhrer's "peace" overtures.

The liberal Manchester Guardian declared editorially, "a false step now giving the impression we are either weak or insincere in our defense of liberties of Europe may make it exceedingly difficult to win sympathy and help of the United States today or tomorrow."

Meanwhile, the nation's armed forces heard King George assert that though "your task may be long and arduous, I have every confidence in your ultimate success."

The king, an admirably announcement said, had paid a two-day visit to the home fleet and inspected a naval airbase, where he decorated fliers reported to have "recently achieved a certain northern sea triumph." The nature of the triumph was not specified.

"The war on the seas came close to Britain during the weekend as the 6,973 ton Holland-America freighter, Binnendijk, enroute from New York to Amsterdam, sank in flames off Weymouth after an explosion. A British warship rescued the crew of 41."

Movement of British troops from England toward the front in France continued unabated in the face of possible peace talk.

Roosevelt Says Rise In Farm Prices Would Be Aid to Prosperity

Chicago — (P) — President Franklin D. Roosevelt in a letter to the National Association of Food Chains today said restoration of farm prices would add support to our national prosperity and general welfare, but added:

"At the same time, consumers of food must be protected against runaway prices caused not by increases at the farm but by increases in margins between the farmer and the kitchen table."

The letter was read at the opening of the association's sixth annual meeting by John A. Logan of Washington, D. C., president of the association and member of the federal government's newly appointed agricultural advisory council.

Three Men Accused Of Operating Racket

Madison — (P) — Three men charged with operating a horse buying and card game racket on southern Wisconsin farmers were under arrest today. Madison police said they took $1,900 from William Schwert, Waukegan farmer, by offering to buy horses from him and borrowing money for a card game until they could produce the cash.

The men were alleged to have taken $20 from Ray Curtis, of Arlington on a similar deal and were arrested yesterday when officials followed their trail to the farm home of Frank Endres, near Springfield Corners.

Second Youth Dies in Crash Near Green Bay

Green Bay — (P) — Herbert Welsin, 19, of Kewaunee, died in a hospital here today, second victim of an automobile mishap in which four other youths were injured.

The accident occurred last Friday morning when the car in which they were riding left Highway 141 near Green Bay, killing Orville Shunka, 18, of Kewaunee.

Two of the four injured youths remain in a serious condition.

Belgium Ready to Fight Violation Of Her Neutrality

Little Country Set to Barricade Roads and Man Forts

Brussels — (AP) — The Belgian-German frontier, which was the first theatre of war in 1914, today is a scene of "armed peace" as the Belgians stand ready to resist any possible invader.

A tour from Liege to the frontier points near Aachen (Aix-la-Chapelle), Malmédy, Saint Vith and nearby posts produced a picture not unlike a country at war.

To protect itself, this neutral country, partly mobilized, must barricade roads, have tank traps and barbed wire ready, and must man forts. Guards and armed patrols must keep a steady watch in wooded areas, scouting many roads, winding in and out of the twisting border.

Over on the German side, little can be seen beyond a peaceful countryside similar to the Belgian country.

Although the Siegfried line parallels the frontier, it is a distance back and residents simply wave vaguely and say "it's back of the hills."

No Special Permits

A typical frontier scene was found at Tulle, Belgian customs post on the Liege-Aachen road. The highway is obstructed by hastily-erected barriers through which cars must weave slowly. Guards inspected passports, but asked for no special permits and permitted visitors to stroll at will up the road toward Germany.

Half a mile away hung a huge Belgian flag, and beyond it a white line on the road guarded by two German soldiers in helmets, greatcoats and military boots. Rifles on shoulders, they stood across the highway and back of them flew a Nazi flag with its black swastika.

Many children who played unconcernedly on the road passed back and forth from country to country, stopping to chat with the guards. In one house situated between the frontier posts a little girl leaned over a window sill and sang at the top of her voice.

Although there is a strategically-important military area, all homes here are occupied. Cows which graze all through the district seemed more numerous than soldiers.

Few Automobiles

Few automobiles passed the frontier although several bicyclists rode through without a challenge. Farther south near Saint Vith, where the countryside is heavily wooded with pine and the terrain is hilly, the problem for a motorist unfamiliar with the region was to stay in Belgium without driving into Germany by mistake.

Near Shoenberg and Lommersweiler, little frontier posts on rough country roads, Belgian highways ran through German territory and German railroads into Belgium. There was ample evidence that Belgium was prepared against surprises in this area as even little farm roads had frontier barriers and guards.

The German side at this point appeared deserted except for occasional military patrols which watched over the area, soldiers said.

Generally, Belgium appeared to be preparing to slow down any motorized advance along the frontier by obstructing and wiping out roads up to prepared lines of defense guarded by a miniature Maginot line.

Camouflaged underground forts with gun emplacements, visible from the road in some areas marked the line Belgium has long prepared.

Frontier areas show advanced development of air-raid defense with trenches and underground shelters. No evidence was seen that civilians had been taken out of these areas.

Confesses He Set Fire to Building Owned by His Son

Edward Pendergast, 48, Town of Harrison, Lodged in Jail

W. E. Finnegan, deputy state fire marshal at Green Bay, said today that Edward Pendergast, 48, town of Harrison, had confessed setting fire to an unoccupied, half-completed dwelling at the intersection of Wilson and Jefferson streets, south of the city limits.

The building, which Finnegan said was owned by Pendergast's son, Colon R. Pendergast, 20, Harding avenue, was destroyed by flames Friday evening. Colon planned to live in the home, according to Finnegan's statement.

The fire marshal said that the elder Pendergast was arrested Friday night after the blaze by Calumet county authorities and taken to Chilton for questioning. He finally confessed Saturday afternoon at Chilton before Finnegan.

The marshal said Pendergast told him he used a jar of gasoline in setting fire to the structure. Pendergast waived preliminary examination and said he would plead guilty in district court next Monday at Chilton. He was placed in the Calumet county jail at Chilton.

Printing Union Works for Unity

Refuses to Adopt Resolution Opposing Affiliation With CIO

Fond du Lac — (AP) — The 19th annual convention of the Wisconsin Typographical Union adjourned yesterday after delegates refused to adopt a resolution opposing affiliation with the C. I. O.

Officers asserted they have not been confirmation of the ITU's ouster from the American Federation of Labor, and that in the interests of harmony "taking sides" should be avoided.

Bertram Day of Kenosha, state president, said members should "work for unity" and avoid stirring up interunion conflicts. A similar view was expressed by August L. Glus of Milwaukee, secretary treasurer.

Day and Glus were re-elected along with Emil Herges of Sheboygan, vice president.

Resolutions opposed state printing and publications being done in out-of-state shops; opposed "reproduction of union labels" in non-union shops; attacked anti-labor legislation and the Republicans in the Wisconsin legislature; urged strengthening of apprenticeship regulations and pledged support to a union drive in Fox river valley cities.

Supreme Court Won't Pass on 1-Cent Suit

Washington — (AP) — The supreme court refused today to pass on a suit to recover one cent.

It declined to interfere with a decision by the California Supreme court, sustaining the collection of this amount from C. Leon de Arayan of East San Diego under the state sales tax law.

De Arayan contended he had been improperly charged a one-cent sales tax on a 15-cent purchase of cardboard from Roy O. Akers, a retailer.

He argued that the sales tax was 3 per cent, while a tax of 1-cent on a 15-cent purchase was at the rate of 6.67 per cent. This was termed excessive and illegal.

But the Finns were expected in diplomatic quarters to put up more of an argument than their neighbors in northern Europe.

Informed Moscow sources foresaw Finnish acceptance of any "reasonable" soviet proposals, but predicted Finland would balk at paying too high a price for an agreement.

Belief was expressed that Russia might seek the unfortified islands of Lantvansaari and Selskar which control the approaches to Leningrad through the gulf of Finland.

Find Abandoned Auto Of Georgia Fugitive

Atlanta, Ga. — (AP) — Search for life-term convict Richard G. Gallagher was intensified today following the finding here last night of the automobile in which he and his blonde bride fled.

In custody since he pleaded guilty 10 years ago to the holdup-slitting of a drugstore clerk, the 29-year-old son of a socially prominent Atlanta woman escaped Friday night nearly 200 miles from here while being transferred from an Atlanta hospital to the state penitentiary in southern Georgia.

At pistol point, he took the car from two guards. His 23-year-old bride went with him but his mother, who had started the prison-ward journey, refused his plea to join the flight.

A Finnish-Russian nonaggression agreement already exists, and economic issues between the nations have been discussed previously through normal diplomatic channels.

The Turks were believed to be moving carefully between Great Britain, on one hand, and Russia and Germany on the other, trying to offend neither.

The talks opened Oct. 4 on the heels of soviet negotiations with two other Baltic nations, Estonia and Latvia, which yielded sweeping military and economic concessions to Russia.

Loss of $21,460 In Forest Fires

Total of 9,010 Acres are Burned in Wisconsin Last Year

Post-Crescent Washington Bureau Washington — More than a thousand forest fires occurred in Wisconsin last year, burning 9,010 acres and causing damage estimated at $21,460, according to the United States Forest Service.

In the country as a whole, 91 per cent of the 38,815,000 acres burned last year was on privately-owned, unprotected land. Only 315,600 acres of federal land was burned and 2,623,270 acres of protected state and privately owned land.

There were more forest fires last year, attributed to spring and summer dry spells and severe and frequent lightning storms in the western mountains, but the acreage burned was smaller than the five-year average.

Of the fires on protected forest lands, 82.7 per cent were caused by man; 8.6 per cent by lightning, and 4.2 per cent were of unknown origin. Of the total, 263 per cent were set by incendiaries, the forest service reports.

There are more than half a billion acres of forest land on which forest fire protection is "essential," the service adds, and of the 658-202,080 acres, 168,883,850 acres are not protected at all.

Wisconsin's forest fires last year numbered 1,016.

Burke Criticizes State's Juvenile Probation System

Waupun Prison Warden Says Work in Most Communities 'Tragic Joke'

Milwaukee — (AP) — Warden John Burke of Waupun state prison charged last night that Wisconsin's juvenile probation system is a "tragic joke" everywhere except in Milwaukee county.

Addressing a group of Lutheran churchmen, warden Burke declared that because the state has one of the finest adult probation systems in the nation, the lack of an adequate juvenile system is less excusable.

Burke declared that juvenile probation work in most communities is handled in a hit-or-miss, part-time fashion which must be remedied.

"Juvenile probation officers," he said, seem to be chosen for their ability to scare children. I know of communities with juvenile officers who are probably earnest enough but are without any inherent or acquired qualifications for their important work."

Probation work usually is limited to perfunctory and stereotyped questioning once a week, Burke said, on the part of persons active in police or similar duties. "If it isn't one of these busy fellows," he said, "the probation officer is likely to be some old lady who loves children and hasn't the slightest idea about her job."

Prospective criminals, Burke said, were those who have failed to take advantage of educational opportunities, who do not know how to employ spare time profitably, who are in poor physical condition, who do not know how to do an honest day's work, and who have not had proper moral training and influence.

Gravediggers of Deansgrade, Northern Ireland, have won their demand for an increase in pay of 60c a week.

contributions in a "propaganda campaign that makes the utilities and Doc Townsend look like pikers."

Fish had proposed a short time before that the house agree to a minimum of 20 hours debate on the neutrality legislation when the resolution reaches it from the senate.

Woodrum told the house he believed the 38 congressmen listed as members of the Committee to Keep America out of Foreign Wars had "little conception" of what the committee was doing.

"Never in my 16 years as a member of this house," said the Virginian, "have I ever heard of such a colossal propaganda undertaking."

Wants Voluntary Report

He asserted the campaign was being conducted from Fish's office, "almost under the capital dome," and it had therefore the affect of misleading citizens to believe the organization was semi-official.

Woodrum's suggestion for a "full, open and frank disclosure" of the committee's program, provoked an exchange with Representative (R-S. D.), who said he was a member of the Fish committee and would favor submission of a voluntary report by the committee on its affairs.

"The president," said Case, "told us the mantle of peace was broad enough to cover everyone. If it be treason to serve on any committee to keep America out of war, then make the most of it."

The South Dakotan added he knew nothing of fund-raising activities on the part of the committee.

When Woodrum asked whether Case approved of those solicitations, Representative Schaefer (R-Wis.) interrupted with the remark that "I say I'll approve of such collections far more than I will the solicitation of millions by selling $250 shake-down, autograph books."

Hits "Atrocities" Stories

The reference apparently was to the sale of Democratic campaign books, autographed by President Roosevelt in 1936.

Representative Wolcott (R-Mich.) in a reply to Woodrum said he was proud to be one of the directors of the national committee and that it was organized "to meet millions of dollars of propaganda" telling of "atrocities" in Poland. He added that he was proud to be the medium through which the American people can get the facts.

Woodrum in his concluding remarks asserted there was "no excuse for any member of the house having to ask for public funds to make known to the public his views on any question."

When Downey took the floor in the senate he proposed that the Monroe doctrine be extended to Australia and New Zealand, arguing that such a policy would make not only those countries but the United States impregnable against attack. He added, however, that he was not in favor of protecting British colonial possessions generally.

Hitler's Speech

Hitler's peace proposal is that east of the Maginot Line the destiny of Europe shall be determined by Stalin and himself, that outside of Europe the former German colonies shall be restored to him.

If the proposal is seriously considered, the United States would, of course, have no standing in, and could have no position on the question of eastern Europe. It has no direct interest. But in the discussion of the colonial question the United States would have a very important interest. For the return of the German colonies on the west coast of Africa would place Hitler's navy nearer to South America, and particularly to Brazil, than our own Navy. The matter would concern us all the more since, for as long as we can now see ahead, the Navy must remain in the Pacific, and it would require many years to construct another Navy capable of defending our communications with the great countries of South America.

Our concern would be dictated by elementary considerations of national defense: for our supplies of rubber and tin we are entirely dependent upon the safety of sea communications with the British and Dutch possessions in the Far East and with Brazil, for manganese, which is a critical raw material in the manufacture of steel, we are dependent on Brazil, on British West Africa and India, and on Russia. As Mr. Eliot has pointed out, the distance from our outermost base at St. Thomas to the Brazilian manganese mines in Minas Geraes is 3,700 miles. That is considerably farther than the distance from the United States to Europe. The establishment of Nazi Germany as a naval power in the south Atlantic at a time when our own Navy is compelled to remain on guard in the Pacific is, therefore, a matter about which no one can be indifferent if he is concerned with the defense of this hemisphere.

Eastern Europe is manifestly within the rule laid down by George Washington that "Europe has a set of primary interests which to us have none or a very remote relation." But what happens in the Atlantic Ocean falls within the set of our primary interests. Therefore, apart from its human and cultural implications, the situation in eastern Europe concerns this country only as it bears upon the question whether the Allies can be forced or persuaded by Hitler to lay down their arms and share with him their naval control of the Atlantic Ocean.

Hitler-Stalin Relationship

Is It To Be Explained?

When we examine the bearing of the eastern European situation on the general position of the Allies, it is evident that any judgment depends upon an estimate as to what are the real relations between Hitler and Stalin. But those relations are a secret, and what the Nazis and Communists have said about them is not at all informative. The only chance we have of piercing the secret is when Stalin or Hitler plays a card, that is makes an actual move rather than a rhetorical declaration.

When we do see the card, we may be able to begin to infer what are some of the other cards that each holds in his hand. Such inferences would have to be based on what we know from the past about the more or less permanent objectives of Russian and German imperialism, and modified by our estimate of the mentality of the Nazi and Bolshevik revolutions.

The cards that have been played thus far are the various lines of demarcation between the two armies of occupation plus the Russian diplomatic advance into the Baltic states. Now it is interesting and probably significant that since the Russian mobilization three different lines of demarcation have been announced. The first was announced in Moscow; it did not bring the Russians as far west as either of the later lines. The second brought the Russians to the suburbs of Warsaw, and within easy reach of the German military base in East Prussia. The third line, which was announced after the second visit of Ribbentrop to Moscow, moves the Russians back a considerable distance.

A careful study of the difference between the second and the third lines will disclose, I believe, that the Russians have adopted, at least provisionally, as their frontier in Poland the so-called Curzon line of 1919, that is to say the line which the British experts at the peace conference thought was the proper frontier of Poland. The territory that the Russians are occupying was not assigned to Poland in the Versailles settlement; it is territory conquered by the Poles some years after the peace conference.

It is territory inhabited by White Russians and Ukrainians, members of the Greek Orthodox church, with only a minority of Roman Catholic Poles. This would seem to signify that Stalin has chosen to share in the partition of the Polish state but not in a partition of the Polish nation, and that he has been careful to arrange matters so that the Polish problem will remain a question between Hitler, the Allies, and the Polish people.

Stalin Holds Land He Doesn't Mean to Keep?

If we study the northern and southern ends of the present Russo-German line, it seems highly probable that at the two ends the frontier is provisional. This is the opinion of Mr. John F. Waterman, expressed in a letter to "The New York Times" this week, and Mr. Waterman, who is clearly a student of the region, makes out a very plausible case that in the north, toward Lithuania and Latvia, and in the south in eastern Galicia, Stalin has advanced beyond his permanent frontier, and is occupying more territory than he means to keep.

For as Mr. Waterman argues, neither north nor in the south is the frontier as now drawn strategically secure. In the north, it places Russia in a position to strike at East Prussia; in the south, it places Russia in a salient which would be a military trap for the Russian Army.

The chances are, therefore, that Hitler has provisionally agreed to the bad military frontier on the north as a pledge that he will not interfere with Stalin while Russia is establishing herself in Estonia, Latvia, and Finland as a naval power in the Baltic; and that he has agreed to the provisional occupation of eastern Galicia (since he cannot help himself at the moment while he has a war in the west) as a screen behind which Stalin can establish himself in Rumania and bar German access to the Black sea. When that has been done, Stalin will presumably withdraw from the east Galician salient.

On the basis of this analysis we are perhaps entitled to speculate a little further. We may ask, for example, what is the probable attitude of Stalin toward Hitler on the one hand and toward the Allies on the other. As regards Hitler, it is evident that Stalin has used the war to establish the best military frontier that Russia has ever had. The frontier of 1914, which included Poland, was indefensible by the Russians as it proved again to be by the Poles; the Russian frontier before the present war was open to a German invasion both through the Baltic states toward Leningrad and through the Polish Ukraine into the Russian Ukraine. The new frontier is the only good military frontier in that part of the world.

Having achieved that frontier, it is clearly Stalin's interest that Hitler should not be so victorious that he can turn on Russia and resume the great ambitions described in "Mein Kampf." Stalin can have no doubt that "the crusade against Bolshevism" can be resumed as easily as it was abandoned. On the other hand, it would seem also to be Stalin's interest that France and Great Britain would not be able ever again to reconstruct the post-war Poland and Rumania, that Italy should not recover any im-

Room Enough in Europe for This War, Clapper Declares

BY RAYMOND CLAPPER

Washington—British censors, who have been holding back with iron hand so much war news, have relented sufficiently to pass a number of sniping shots against the effort over here to create a safety belt that might help to keep the European war out of waters around the western hemisphere.

Raymond Clapper

An admiralty spokesman is permitted to say that Great Britain and France "could not accept" any restriction on the right of their warships to enter American territorial waters. The pontifical London Times solemnly warns that any attempt by the American navy to enforce the safety zone would "amount to an act of war and nothing else." Lord Lothian, the British ambassador here, puts on his old catspaw heels and slips into the state department to see Secretary Hull, and to give him, no doubt, a word of fatherly advice—an old British custom.

Now isn't it too bad? Imagine us not wanting to have part of the European war fought around the shores of this continent!

Americans think there is room enough in Europe for this war. We are willing—and are in process of enacting legislation—to keep American citizens and American ships out of European waters. Over here we think there is elbow room for the war on the continent of Europe, and in the North sea, the Baltic and the waters around Europe. We are willing to sacrifice trade and shipping in order to stay out of their way while they fight it out. Doesn't it seem fair enough that we should ask them to do their fighting in their home waters and not here around our shores?

That is all that is involved. But the dear old London Times says that if we insist on that—it's an act of war.

It doesn't come with good grace from the British admiralty to be getting tough about this at the very time when the administration is working to lift the arms embargo—solely to give a break to the British and French. American public sentiment is overwhelmingly in Britain's corner and is discretely silent about the war debt and the British blacklist of dozens of firms in Latin America.

Safety Belt Proposition Widely Misunderstood

This safety belt proposition is widely misunderstood. It is not an attempt to push the technical 3-mile limit hundreds of miles out to sea. In the strictly legal sense, that limit is left just where it was placed by Jefferson who set it at three miles because that was as far as a cannon could shoot in his day. He placed the line just far enough out to make the shore safe from the heaviest guns of British and French men-of-war. We still leave it here although modern weapons of war have ranges that make the 3-mile limit obsolete.

It is not a change in the 3-mile limit, which still, technically, remains the limit of territorial waters. What was done in the declaration of Panama was to assert that the American republics have "special rights" in adjacent waters—extending out considerably beyond that. The line has been set 200 to 300 miles out to take in inter-American trade routes so that shipping between North and South America may move back and forth within this protected area. The arrangement exempts British and French possessions in the western hemisphere. It permits the warships of belligerents to travel within the safety zone and asks only that they behave themselves. The purpose is to prevent hostilities within those waters.

Authorities in international law say there are precedents for naval patrols far offshore. Something similar was done, they say, when the campaign against the Barbary pirates was undertaken on the North African coast, and again when the United States and Great Britain co-operated in suppressing slave traffic. Jefferson once set a patrol out to the line of the gulf stream and intended to take it to mid-Atlantic but didn't because he lacked the navy to under take the task.

Nobody is trying to shut off the British and French possessions over here. It is only an attempt to keep order in this area, to exercise the right of American nations to continue their commerce up and down the western hemisphere free from the menace of European belligerents who are politely requested to do their fighting outside.

Let Lord Lothian tip off his government not to be acting like a gang of nazis.

THE PROBLEM OF INVADING AMERICA

Former Secretary of State Stimson urges his country to lift the embargo upon shipment of munitions because in case France and Britain are beaten the struggle will "become our own battle."

In one form or another this scarehead has been employed to frighten the American people out of their wits and persuade them to steps they would not think of taking were they controlled only by their cool and better judgment.

For a very long time the most astute military minds the world has developed have laid plans for the purpose of successfully invading England. They haven't gone quite so crazy as to even think of invading America.

The distance from Dover to Calais, the point where the English coast comes closest to the Continent, is but 25 miles. But the combined effort of military technicians and strategists have so far failed to discover a practical method whereby England could be subdued. And the difficulty is that 25 miles of ocean with its impetuous and destructive storms, its untamable tides against the power of which men's creations are like a birch bark chip above Niagara.

Nor should it be forgotten that the entire continent of Europe has respected many things about England but hated her intensely for centuries. Men with practically unlimited resources have devoted their lives to figure out a reasonably safe means of transferring an army to England and thereafter feeding and furnishing it with munitions so that it might function advantageously. They have thrown up their hands in despair. It just cannot be done. It isn't the English army that prevents it because that army is not to be compared in numbers or training with continental armies.

It is the sea. It is the uncertainty of transportation. It is the nightmare of an army transferred but, perhaps, left to starve, or, with its munitions exhausted, at the mercy of a smaller army.

And if Mr. Stimson or any other fear jabberers in this country want to know the chance of Germany or any other country ever subduing America they will have to do some interesting figuring. They might multiply the 25 miles between England and France by over a hundred which will give the relative positions of England and America to continental Europe. But that would hardly be enough. As the distance increases the perils to those who must transport an immense army of millions of men and tens of millions of tons of provisions and munitions increase noticeably and tremendously. It might be a fine problem for the student of calculus or even a former secretary of state.

But it is practically beyond the realm of possibility so long as America maintains any semblance of an armed defense and carefully observes the growth of noxious weeds upon its own soil.

WAR PUTS LIBERTY IN CHAINS
Although the French democracy is built in some particulars upon a base radically different from ours it is still a democracy in every true sense of the word and the freedom of the individual is its most important consideration.

But shortly after the war broke out a Parisian woman was sent to prison for eight months because she merely voiced the opinion that it would have been wiser to give Danzig to Germany. Then a Parisian cook was locked up in a jail for fifteen months because he said Hitler always won because he was right. And last week others were arrested for the mere offense of appealing to the government to make "immediate peace."

The liberty of the individual which is paramount in a democracy during peace is practically obliterated during war. In this respect France is not much different than America when we engaged in the previous World War. The liberty of the individual is not abolished because he is hated nor that a disagreement with his views exists. It is abolished because war depends so vitally upon morale, and morale does not prosper upon contrary opinions.

A successful army must be well fed. It needs to be satisfied with its clothing. It is encouraged when it is suitably armed and trained. But it may have all these material things and fail ignominiously if it lacks spirit. Spirit can be maintained best through a conviction of the righteousness of its cause. Perhaps that is the only way to maintain the proper spirit for any great length of time.

This view of the peculiar effect upon men, their nerves and their mentalities, by armed conflict, causes the infliction of penalties upon those who seek to interfere with the successful culmination of the war once it is started.

We may have widely divided counsels, as we usually do concerning every other question of government excepting that of war, and all this without substantially interfering with the course of government once its ruling body makes a decision.

But war calls for great personal sacrifice. And human flesh is weak. It can only be induced to continue that sacrifice if softer voices do not counsel a softer course that would lead to a softer bed.

The same line of reasoning that banishes liberty of the individual entirely during wartime suggests painting the enemy as a wretch of fiendish purpose and diabolical method. An army that does not hate the enemy can hardly be expected to fight it at its top rate.

And although the public generally execrates war it should become better and closer acquainted with it so it might take some genuine steps to abolish it. If each individual could see and listen personally to conspiracies instituted in his own country to enrage him against the enemy, to shame and humiliate him as a coward for even expressing a thought contrary to that of the leaders who seldom are scratched, all the vials of wrath pent up for many centuries would break loose upon these practices that attend the battlefield.

It is one thing to hate war, and a natural thing, but the hatred of the mass of the people would mount to new and more perilous heights if they only knew a little more of the inside of war, even the inside in a democracy.

KEWAUNEE'S EXPERIENCE WITH A PERSONAL BOND

The liability that matured to Kewaunee county because of the defalcations of its county clerk will never be paid in full because the bondsmen for the errant official are financially unable to repair the damage he occasioned.

Many will be surprised to hear of personal signatures to official bonds. The last 50 years of education in this regard didn't seem to take root in Kewaunee county, and maybe elsewhere. There are perhaps many similar bonds that are worth but a small percentage of their face value if it became necessary to call on the bondsmen for fulfillment of their promises.

We have corporate bonding companies that came into life just because so many personal bondsmen could not make good when the time of trouble came. Gradually our fathers and grandfathers concluded that if bonds were to mean anything at all something would have to be done about the fact that personal bonds too often didn't mean much.

It is not merely the fact that when a corporation created for that purpose becomes a bondsman payment will be made at 100 cents on the dollar but the certainty of liability and the corporate advantage of quick admission and prompt payment: once that liability accrues, have all facilitated to lessen the injury of the original defalcation and repair the public damage in every respect possible.

It is a weary imposition upon friends to ask them to sign bonds. Why should they risk their all to hold the public harmless from either a misstep of some public official or just a plain blunder, in many of which cases, too, there is liability?

Individuals, though but vaguely realizing the lurking perils, do not like to sign bonds. But oftentimes they find it difficult to refuse. They have been unable to protect themselves as the lawyers did years ago when the legislature saw fit to prohibit attorneys from signing certain bonds to relieve them of the embarrassment and danger of constantly going good for their clients.

Our attention has been called to several instances in the Fox River valley where public servants have misappropriated funds. Immediately upon notice the corporate bondsman dispatched an auditor to go through the books and investigate the facts. The auditor was business-like and thorough. He completed his work as quickly as possible. His investigation supported the charge against the official. Just about as promptly as a check could be made out the bonding company replaced the misappropriated funds. The entire system is fair, just and sensible. It is supported by a small premium paid by the good and bad alike.

Most states provide a constant watch over the funds of the bonding companies which must be invested in a limited class of first rate securities so as to be available when needed. Some states go to the extent of even compelling the corporate bondsman to deposit some of its securities with the state treasury as a further safeguard against evil days. The cost of a bonding company is hardly felt and becomes quickly absorbed in creating a state of virtual certainty in respect to public funds.

The fact that the bondsmen at Kewaunee hurt themselves to the quick even in making a partial settlement on their liability is an evidence of their manhood and further proof of the great wrong done them by even permitting them to sign the bond, an act that is almost always gratuitous.

Aside from bonds that mature in a very short time such as bail the official bodies that now have authority to approve bonds should in the public interest warn individuals from signing such instruments. Kewaunee's experience suggests the advisability of an immediate search of public bonds to ascertain before the horse is stolen whether there is sufficient property available to meet liability and to counsel securing corporate bondsmen whenever possible.

DALE HARRISON'S In Old New York

New York—Manhattan Marquee:
After a quarter of a century in show business Milton Berle has finally gone on the Stage. In "See My Lawyer," first of the season's George Abbott productions, Berle who has been a performer since he was six-years-old makes his debut as the member of a regular cast in a regular play. After 25 years of being Berle, the young comedian now has a role requiring him to be a character not himself. It is difficult for a fellow whose formula for fun has been the Cantor-Jessel formula—the formula which drags the performer's personal affairs into the monologue and considers same funny. Berle is definitely talented, and his chance to break into the legitimate theatre should prove fully as important to Berle as to "See My Lawyer."

Manhattan Music:
The indignation of musicians against the "desecration" of the classics by the impertinent dance bands has about subsided. The reaction is all in favor of the classics. A Tin Pan Alley-op called "The Lamp is Low" becomes a hit, but more to the point it brings to public attention Ravel's "Pavane" from which its melody was taken; and in consequence the "Pavane" is now played frequently on semi-popular programs.

Among the classic composers who are currently reincarnated in the gaudy garments of popular songwriting are Tchaikovsky, Ravel, Mozart ("In the 18th Century Drawing Room") and Mendelssohn (Alec Templeton's diversion entitled "Mendelssohn, Mow 'em Down.")

Manhattan Midnight:
Horace Heidt has brought the Biltmore Roof one of its gayest seasons, and now is doing the same thing at the same hotel's Bowman Room. Nan Wynn's vocalizing rounds out for Hal Kemp one of the smartest bands in town. Two new Fifty-Second Street Places-to-visit are the Club Carr and a Brown Derby—the former having four floors, including a membership club, and the latter catering to that strata of civilization which thinks "The Good Old Summer Time" is better music than "Jumping Jive." The football season has turned Saturday nights into carnivals, the pigskin enthusiasts virtually taking over the town's joy joints from early evening until the Ordinance shuts off the False Courage juices at promptly 3 a.m.

Cops and Robbers:
Police Commissioner Valentine is the strictest disciplinarian who has headed the department in the memory of any living burgher. Generally acknowledged as giving the city excellent policing, Valentine is probably least liked by policemen themselves. It is the same reaction most workmen have to what they consider a slave-driving boss.

Since Europe went more-or-less to war Valentine has had his 19,000 policemen on virtually a war basis. The men have been getting only one day off every twenty-seven. I have heard of some detectives who have not been able to get home to their families often than once every two weeks, sleeping at station houses and working the rest of the time.

As far as the city's normal needs for extra policing is concerned, they are quieter than for many years. The special activity which makes the entire force so busy is the war—the guarding of piers, industries, consulars, the policing of all public places where madmen might do damage, and the constant search for all who menace the lives and the principles of Americans.

People and Places:
Phil Baker, who makes fun for funds, was dunking a nonchalant doughnut into some nonchalant coffee at the brow-lifting Penthouse Club the other evening. A lady at an adjoining table recognized the comedian and smilingly chided: "Don't you know that Emily Post frowns on that sort of thing, Mr. Baker?" "That's all right," replied Baker, dunking another section of his doughnut, "I frown on Emily Post." When the lady had gone, Baker inquired of the head waiter who the lady was. "She," was the reply, "is the lady who writes about etiquette—Emily Post."

Baker took another dunk. "The next time you see her," he told the captain, "please tell her that Baker says it isn't polite to speak to a fellow without being introduced."

The Charity Ball season will open in mid-October with a dinner-dance called "Hollywood History." Dancers will come costumed in the manner of any moving picture they elect, going back as far as the cinema's cradle days of 1895, if they want to. The Ball is for the Federation of Crippled and Disabled, a unique charity in that it is composed entirely of disabled persons, from the president on down.

Looking Backward

10 YEARS AGO
Monday, Oct. 7, 1929

Marshall C. Graft, commander of the state department of the American Legion, returned Sunday from the annual convention of the national organization at Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. H. H. Heible was elected vice president of the American Association of University Women at a meeting Saturday afternoon at the home of Miss Mabel Wolter, Spencer street. Other officers elected were Mrs. George Nixon, recording secretary; and Mrs. G. S. Brazeau, corresponding secretary. Miss Ruth Saecker spoke on her travels in Europe during the summer.

25 YEARS AGO
Monday, Oct. 12, 1914

Italy had recalled 100,000 troops from Tripoli and Cyrenaica. Germany was reported to have lost 45,000 troops during the attack on Fortresses Waelheim, Wavre and St. Catherine and had imposed a $100,000,000 indemnity on Antwerp. The Germans had removed their big guns and it was thought they would be sent to reduce Verdun. The fall of Antwerp left Holland between two fires.

Oscar Kunitz and Fred Krantstoven were to take a daily plunge in the Fox river until Christmas.

Miss Mary Heyman had been elected president, and Miss Olivia Gluckstein secretary of the sophomore class at the St. Joseph academy and boarding school at Green Bay. Both were Appleton girls.

AT A LECTURE

Interpreting the modern art for us.
He drew an oblong; then he filled it in
With curtains and with blinds, and with a thin
Line indicated sunlight shining through;
Then rubbed it out. But with the glorious Aid of imagination we could still
See the tall window and the sloping sill.
The window box, the posies wet with dew,
And I, suddenly lonely, thought of you.
Knowing that though the dear lines of your face
Were rubbed away, and nowhere could I find Yourself, I still could see you, were I blind.
For only Death's swift fingers can erase
The pictures of you, placed with certain art
Upon the canvass of my loving heart.

A Bystander In Washington

BY PRESTON GROVER

Washington—It sounds funny to hear reputable military scholars talk about battles and maneuvers in terms of the psychological effect they will have on one lone man well removed from the battle front, but that is the sort of talk most current in informal spots in Washington.

"Hitler is a mystic," we are told. "He has had phenomenal success with his guesses as to what will work for Germany and what will not. He has consistently outguessed his generals. He has convinced a large part of the German population that he is infallible. Also he has convinced himself, and that makes him vulnerable."

That is a composite quotation from several sources. It represents what certain skilled observers believe to be the basic French-British strategy. Constant pressure of the blockade, of propaganda among the German population, of fighting on "German soil" on the west front—these and other factors are looked upon as likely to press Hitler into some decision which may turn out badly. The "myth" of infallibility will be shattered. Then might come a reshaping of German policy and an early end of the war.

Right
The thing sounds almost too slick but there is a substantial trace of fact running through it. It is generally accepted that Hitler moved into the demilitarized Rhineland four years ago in violation of the advice of his army executives. They thought France would fight. They were wrong. Hitler was right.

The same thing happened in Austria. The generals were wrong again.

Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Germany, stated in his report of conversations with Hitler that even General Goerring, No. 2 Nazi, was surprised and dismayed at the sudden move last spring into the rest of Czechoslovakia. Goerring and the generals were wrong. Nobody made a fight about it.

Hitler was right again about the speedy success of the drive through Poland. Again, reports here indicate, some of his generals had been mistaken.

Keep It Up
Now informed sources have it that there is real conflict once more between Hitler and some of his generals as to whether a drive against France should be launched in event no peace comes at the end of the Polish conquest. Strategists here say England and France would like nothing better than for Germany to try a break through Belgium.

If such a drive were successful even in the beginning it might give Italy and Russia the incentive they need to come in with Germany for the final kill. In that event, Hitler would be right again and the generals all around would be wrong, both in Germany and in the camps of his enemies.

But if things went wrong on the western front a collapse of the "myth of infallibility" could bring on a quick end to the war. The whole thing is tenuous but this is a very tenuous war. Even though the troops are arrayed in battle line, it still is a "war of nerves."

Just a Step Behind the News
By Dave Boone

Submarines are reported off Miami beach, but I don't take that too seriously. It may be just anti-Florida cruise propaganda by the railroads and airplane companies. German subs off Florida wouldn't be much of a problem. Just get the crews to come ashore and stay in Miami for a few days and nights of dog racing, horse racing, house parties, etc., down there and they wouldn't be fit for fighting again for years.

Well, it will be a novelty if we ever get back to the days when a ticket to a fifth game in a world series will be any good.

BLUEBEARD'S SEVENTH WIFE

Under the CAPITOL DOME

BY JOHN WYNGAARD

Madison—For the last ten months this reporter has spent his days doing two things, listening to the speeches of politicians in the legislature, and their gossip, plans and opinions—writing of their speeches, their deeds, and their misdeeds.

Wyngaard
The reporter will be on a vacation. He will give to the reader of this column the opportunity of listening to the politicians. He will give to the politicians the opportunity to write about themselves.

For the next two weeks "guest" reporters will fill this space daily. HANDICAPPED? The members of the respective political parties represented in the legislature which just ended its 1939 biennial session will contribute their thoughts on their accomplishments, their criticisms, their boasts, and of course, their partisan opinions on their own virtues and the lack of them in the opposition. For the good politician is the antithesis of the good reporter. For the reporter objectivity is the ultimate ideal. For the politician there is no middle-way. To expect, therefore, a neutral discussion of Wisconsin Political questions is manifestly futile.

The series will be a review of the past legislative session, and a preview of the next campaign.

Participating will be Lt. Gov. Walter S. Goodland, who once ran a newspaper himself and who at 76 has attained a mellow, albeit conservative philosophy of life, politics, and government.

GUEST STARS
Perhaps because his father sat on the circuit bench in Appleton until he was 84, many friends of Goodland believe that the peak of his career is yet to be reached.

There will be Rev. W. F. Peterson, 1939 Republican floor leader in the assembly, recently picked by Heil for a seat on the Wisconsin public service commission.

Phil Nelson, Progressive whip in the senate, will tell something of his complaints against the majority party during the recent session. There are those who say that Nelson will be governor some day.

Vernon W. Thompson, lean-jawed, sober speaker of the assembly, contributes a prideful piece on legislation which he helped steer to the law books on behalf of the administration.

Maurice Coakley, the page boy who in the course of a few years became administration boss of the Wisconsin senate, tells what he perceives as the philosophy of the Republican administration in which he was a key-man in another column.

While Paul Alfonsi, fiery young representative of the folks up in Vilas and Iron counties will explain why he fought the Republican majority in the assembly so bitterly on behalf of the Progressives.

Then there will be a contribution by Arthur W. Tiller, former political reporter who joined Gov. Heil's official family as press secretary last winter, and Morris Rubin, another reporter turned politician who

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author

RIBOFLAVIN

First it was called B-2 and then G and in its pure state (it has been chemically isolated and synthesized) it is now called riboflavin. Almost invariably it occurs naturally in the vitamin B-complex, of which it is one of the several components. Quite of egg being the only food in which riboflavin is known to occur without other components of the B-complex. Egg yolk, however, is over twice as rich as egg white in vitamin G (B-2, riboflavin) and also contains considerable vitamin A and considerable amounts of the other components of the B-complex.

In his book "Chemistry of Food and Nutrition," published by Macmillan, 1937, Sherman says that when the food is poor in vitamin G for any considerable length of time—digestive disturbances, nervous depression (different from the symmetrical polyneuritis of vitamin B deficiency), general weakness and deterioration of tone and an unhealthy (or "unhappy") condition of the skin are apt to develop. Incidence of infectious disease increased, vitality diminished, life shortened, and the prime of life curtailed by the early onset of senility.

This is no fountain of youth I'm turning on, but if you feel and look older than you are I say do have some more riboflavin.

Excellent food sources of riboflavin are beef liver, egg (both yolk and white), milk, beef test, dried peas, fresh peas, watercress, spinach, lean beef, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, plain wheat, wheat germ, beef heart, canned salmon, turnip greens, evaporated milk, dry malted milk, bacon, carrots. The richest source of all is a special strain of dried yeast, not the yeast used for baking.

Riboflavin and probably also another component of the B-complex, isolated in 1938 and called by various research investigators vitamin H, B-6, rat dermatitis factor, rat acrodynia factor, both serve to keep the skin healthy. Numerous scientific investigators have determined this independently thru animal feeding experiment. The characteristic dirty brown, parchment-like rough, scaly cracked skin condition of pellagra is the effect of extreme deficiency of these two factors and of a third factor called nicotinic acid. There is reason to believe that prolonged moderate deficiency of these same factors of the B-complex in the diet is responsible for the early appearance of wrinkles and other signs of senility—that is, loss of elasticity, sallowness, dryness and harshness as well as wrinkling, in the skin of countless men and women who rely too confidently on the assurance of some eminent doctor or specialist that people in this country need not worry about vitamins as they get plenty in everyday food.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

What, Eat It Raw?

When I bought raw sugar today I noticed for the first time that it is labelled "Raw Sugar—not for food." The salesman said some government regulation requires this label, he supposed because of some impurities in raw sugar. Can you relieve my mind about it? Have been using raw sugar for a year or more and never had a complaint.

serves as secretary to Phil LaFollette, leader of the Progressives.

Topping it off will be an analysis of the Wisconsin legislature by a man who has the realism of the politician and the sensitiveness to public problems of the intelligent citizen-taxpayer, Director Paul Reynolds of the Wisconsin Taxpayers' Alliance.

And now to the field and stream!

have found it most satisfactory. (Mrs. R. T. C.)

Answer—Nothing in the manufacture of crude or raw sugar from sugar beets or sugar cane renders the crude raw product unwholesome. I'd continue using the raw sugar if I liked it.

Nervous Weakness
The calcium and vitamin D treatment you suggested has relieved my nervous spells almost completely (age 58). My daughter, aged 28, is getting fine results from following the diet and other suggestions you give in your instructive booklet on Nerves. (L. B. S.)

Answer—Glad to send copy of booklet "Nerves and Nutrition" on request. Inclose twenty-five cents and 1-cent-stamped envelope bearing your address.

Tuberculosis
What is the treatment for incipient pulmonary tuberculosis? (L. M.)

Answer—Lung tuberculosis in the early or beginning stage, before the patient's health is apparently affected seriously; of course long before any tubercle bacilli are given off in the sputum. Successful treatment implies first a diagnosis and in this stage the diagnosis is a matter of the physician's judgment or opinion—physical examinations, X-rays, tuberculin tests, study of symptoms being only confirmative of the medical opinion. Positive diagnosis is essential to insure cooperation of patient's family and compliance of the patient with the physician's instructions. Most essentials of cure:

1. Constant advice and care of a physician
2. Rest
3. Diet well balanced in fat, protein and carbohydrate content and also vitamins and minerals
4. Open air life
5. Freedom from worry and other harmful emotions

Circumcision
Would you like your advice about circumcision of our two boys, one 3 1/2 years, the other two weeks old. (Mrs. R. B.)

Answer—Circumcision is advisable only when there is evident obstruction to urination or when retraction of foreskin for daily cleanliness is not possible.

Modern Treatment
Thanks for recommending Dr. He treated my piles with entire satisfaction. Little pain or discomfort followed the injections, and I kept at my work every day, driving a truck and juggling heavy kegs and barrels. It is a tremendous relief, and I write so that others may know how efficiently and painlessly these troublesome conditions can be treated by modern methods. (F. P.)

Answer—Thank you, sir, for your courtesy. Probably the injection treatment is the method used in ninety per cent of all cases of internal piles today. The old-time operation, in comparison, is pretty crude treatment. Still a few quaint practitioners still lay back their ears and insist on the clamp and cautery horror or nothing.

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writer's names are never printed. Only initials of general interest will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, 265 El Camino, South, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Last Step of Work Will Be Construction of Septic Tank

New London—Filling and leveling of the new Hatten Memorial Athletic field at Hatten park was completed last week and final grading and seeding will be done this week, according to F. A. Jennings, park superintendent. A road shaper loaned by the town of Horton will be used to complete the surfacing of the 17,000 yards of fill which were hauled onto the field.

The entire stadium project, including toilet and shower facilities, will be completed by Oct. 20, according to the superintendent. A pit has been dug for a septic tank and construction of the tank will start this week for the last step of the work.

The shelter house at the park also has been completed down to the last detail, including an outside enclosing stone fence, landscaping, and interior finishing. The shelter has been reported a popular spot of late for family picnics and reunions, for which it is particularly designed.

Fred R. Zimmerman, secretary of state, inspected the park on his visit to New London for the recent bridge dedication and expressed his opinion that the park is one of the best in the state.

TO THE EMPLOYED MAN WHO NEEDS A CASH LOAN

Read how you can borrow $20 to $300 privately and simply — Repay in monthly installments that fit your budget — Quick service

YOU, like most employed people, probably find that you must sometimes borrow to meet emergencies. If you need only a few dollars for a short time, you get a loan from a friend or relative.

But when you need $50, $100 or $200 you doubtless hesitate to ask others to advance money to you. That's when Household Finance can help you. For Household Finance has a special loan plan for employed men and women faced with urgent money problems.

No endorsers required To borrow at a bank requires collateral. Or you must ask others to endorse your note—to act as guarantors in case you are unable to repay your loan. The Household plan spares you this embarrassment.

When you borrow at Household you don't have to ask friends or fellow-workers to sign your note. We ask for no salary or wage assignment, no stocks or bonds. Loans are made on furniture, car or note. No credit inquiries are made of friends or relatives. You get the money you need privately and promptly.

Repay monthly You repay your loan in convenient monthly installments. Suppose you need $100 and can, for instance, conveniently repay $9.77 a month. Twelve installments of this amount will repay your loan in full. Or, if you wish smaller payments, as little as $6.43 per month for 20 months will also repay a $100 loan.

Find the amount of cash you need in the first column of the loan table. Then read across, picking out the monthly payment which fits your budget. See how you may make very small payments if you wish. Or you may pay larger installments and pay up sooner. Note that a $100 loan repaid in four monthly installments, for instance, costs only $6.44.

One rate to everyone Household has only one price—the same rate to all whether new customers or former borrowers.

In case of sickness or unemployment Household shows the borrower every consideration. Last year Household foreclosed on only one chattel mortgage for each 10,000 loans—an action taken then only as protection against fraud.

Ask for information Study the loan and payment table. Then phone or visit us for further information without obligation.

READ THIS GUARANTEE We guarantee the total amount figured by using this table to be the full amount you will pay when payments are made on schedule. You will pay less if you pay your loan ahead of schedule.

"The bidding:
North East South West
Pass 1 spade 2 hearts 3 diamonds
Pass 3 spades 4 hearts Pass
Pass Pass

"I won't claim that the bidding was very good. It happened in a social game and there was nothing at stake. The play, however, was very interesting.

"West led the spade queen. It is worth noting that if East had overtaken and cashed the diamond king there would have been no play for the contract. East, however, encouraged with the spade eight and West continued with the deuce. This marked West with only two spades originally and East with six. I ruffed the second lead with the nine of hearts, overtook the heart five with dummy's seven, ruffed a third round of spades with the king, and ruffed the last spade. I saw that the only chance to make the hand was for East to have the ace or king of diamonds singleton, and, therefore, I led a small diamond. West played the nine but I ducked in dummy and, to my great pleasure, East had to win with the king. His return was immediate. If he had chosen to lead a spade, I could have chuckled my club four while ruffing in dummy, then taken the club finesse, after which I would have had to concede only one diamond trick. On East's actual choice of a low club, I won in dummy with the jack, finessed again on a return club lead, and conceded only one more diamond. As you will see, I lost in all only one spade trick and two diamonds.

J. B. Alabama"

Somebody always is stealing my thunder when I want to comment on questionable bidding. The mere fact that my correspondent said, "I won't claim that the bidding was very good," deprives me of the legitimate joy of mentioning that he did considerable bidding all by himself.

While declarer's play was excellent and took full advantage of a fortunate lay of cards, this is just one more of those instances in which most of the "credit" for the fulfilled contract must be given to the defender. I do not maintain that East could have foreseen the situation that eventually developed, but I do say that there was no excuse for his failure to overtake the opening lead and lay down the diamond king. For all he could tell the spade queen might be singleton, in which case the overtake play would certainly work out to the best advantage, inasmuch as West could not be expected to underlead his probable diamond ace at the second trick. There would be no danger of the overtake play setting up the spade nine, since East always could keep his J-8 over the 9-7, if he felt so inclined.

To return to declarer's play: His analysis that success depended entirely on finding a singleton diamond holding or ace in East hand was quite correct. Also, in view of the bidding, this was by no means a remote chance, considering that West, who had bid three diamonds, evidently did not hold both the ace and king, since he probably would have opened the suit originally.

My Neighbor Says—

Do not keep cyclamens in too warm a room. Too much heat causes the blossoms to lose their firmness. Keep soil about the roots quite damp.

Autumn is the best time to paint your house. At that time there is likely to be less rain and fewer insects than in hot or cold weather.

Beauty and You

by PATRICIA LINDSAY

I wouldn't be surprised if Barbara's fragrant personality didn't win her brand new husband! Her subtle loveliness attracts many friends.

Spray on your favorite perfume as the final touch to grooming and what happens? You sniff and you get a lift! You go out feeling pretty satisfied with yourself and a little more assured of having a good time. Buried deep within you is the thought, "I hope he smells my perfume and likes it too!" What you really mean is, "I hope this perfume lives long to me!"

It was ever thus. Just as the flowers lure bees with their fragrance so have women for generations wooed the men they loved. Well-planned fragrance of person can be a powerfully magnetic asset not only in the game of love, but in our busy life. It should always be the final touch to grooming, however, and never used as a decoy if your grooming is not meticulous! Because some of our foreign sisters used it to "cover up" neglect, many American men grew to dislike all fragrances. But now perfume has become as much a necessity in our feminine lives as the daily shower or bath, and show me the man who isn't fascinated by a truly lovely blend!

Where to Begin

You can make this winter a successful fragrant one—if you begin right. After you have said, "I resolve to keep meticulously groomed at all times," begin to create a lovely aura which will cast the desired spell.

Sachets will help a great deal. Sprinkle them among your lingerie, put more in the drawers where you keep gloves, hand bags and hankies. Sew small sachet pads in the seams of your dresses and if the sachet loses its fragrance after a while, simply spray perfume on the pads.

In your bath dump a fragrant oil of settling salts or a bubbling scented effervescent. Take a brisk rub-down with a Cologne you like after a tubbing, or puff gobs of body powder on your skin which boasts a matching fragrance to the perfume you choose to wear.

Many girls use a scented lotion to set their hair—particularly in preparation for a big date. It dries as quickly as any other setting lotion and leaves a lasting fragrance to tease the nostrils of your dancing partners!

There are amusing gadgets you can wear to keep perfume always with you. Little earrings which have wells for perfumed bits of cotton. Rings through which you may slip a real or artificial flower heavily scented. Necklaces in locket style in which you carry a tiny sachet and numerous lapel decorations designed to hold change of fragrances.

And, of course, as you know, perfume itself has become stylized. There are brews for daytime wear, others for evening. There are lily floral scents for the younger and heady mixtures for the more sophisticated. If you can afford only one good fragrance take your time selecting it—for a good fragrance particularly flattering to you can be a joy to the last drop. Learn to use your perfume expertly. It is no longer sufficient to dab a bit behind your ear or on your wrists. You will find a good atomizer a friend indeed and a great saving. By spraying on a perfume you get more out of it and it seems to cling longer to your clothes or hair.

Well now, my pets, I've told you now to start a successful winter. Let's hope your fragrance will attract the happiness you desire! My perfume list suggests fragrances for personalities. If you request it, enclose a self-addressed envelope bearing a 3-cent stamp. Write me care of this paper.

DIVORCE SITUATION

Dear Mrs. Post: My wife was married before—and we have been married for only about a year. And in that time, she has asked her first husband to our house to dinner four times—and I don't think this is fair to me. Not only that, but I feel sure it will make people talk. I hesitate saying anything to her about it—and yet since I do feel this way perhaps I should ask her not to invite him. What do you think?

Answer: I think that the answer is that of your own attitude. The fact that seeing her first husband offend your sensibilities, makes you unhappy and spoils your home should make it plain to her that she must not ask him.

Returning Shower Gifts

Dear Mrs. Post: I have just broken my engagement. I was to have been married in just a few weeks and my friends have given me a number of showers. Now, besides having to answer all sorts of embarrassing questions about what happened, I'm worried over what to do with those presents. Should I send them back with a note, or take them back? Or neither?

Answer: Shower presents are usually things of very little value. And if yours are trifles, then the best thing to do is to keep them. After all, they were given you by your friends for your own personal use. I'm sure they want you to have them no matter what has happened.

A Business Situation

Dear Mrs. Post: I am secretary to a very important business man and I have been with him only about five weeks. A week ago he

Children Should be Trained In Proper Use of Telephone

BY ANGELO PATRI

Few children below the teen age enjoy keeping themselves clean and their belongings in neat order. Mother has to go over the hard places and the corners every morning before the start for school is made. "Why don't you wash your ears?" "I did."

Well, so he did, and he probably cannot see the shades of color that betray him. It is going to take time and experience and the spirit of adolescence to make him feel the comfort of cleanliness and understand its value for him.

In the meantime, boys and girls have to be taught to hang up their clothes, put them in bureau drawers, and boxes where they belong. It is difficult to teach this to children in their teens. It has to be taught between the time the child begins to dress himself and the onset of adolescence. It is not easy then, but it is almost impossible later.

Hanging up night clothes, so that they hang evenly, and in the air, is easy enough to do provided there is the hanger waiting and the hook ready. If the children find the hanger and the hook within easy reach they are just as pleased to use them as not. They don't mind putting the pajamas on the hanger if it is handy, but if it is not in sight they forget it, haven't the push of habit or desire for neatness to drive them to look for it, haven't the interest in finding it. If reaching the hood is a struggle, they will avoid it if possible. Set the stage for easy disposal of the garments and they will be put in their places. Daily experience will soon set the habit.

What are you going to do with the girl or boy, in high school, who drop their things whenever they happen to be and let them lie? One young lady of seventeen did just that. Her coat lay in the hall, her sweater on the piano. Her evening dress lay over the back of a chair, one slipper under the chair, one lying against the radiator where it was kicked off the night before. The room was strewn with garments. Rising late the young lady had scrambled about for things she wanted, their contents spilling over. The place looked as though it had been trampled.

Mother groaned. "It will take me hours to tidy this room. I simply haven't the time or energy to do this any more. I will leave the room just as it is until you arrange it as you found it. Hereafter your room has to be in order or it will not be cleaned, nor your bed made."

"All right. Just leave it. I'll do it," said the young lady blithely. But she did not reach home that afternoon until it was close to dinner time, and there were a thousand things she had to do. And the next day was no better. Nor the next. And about that time she wanted to wear that evening dress, and some fresh clothes, and she did want her room tidied. And mother would not help. She stayed home that night and cried. It was harder on mother, too, but it had to be that way. The younger you catch them the easier the job of training.

Mr. Patri will give personal attention to inquiries from parents and school teachers on the care and discipline of children. Write him in care of this paper, enclosing a three-cent stamped, addressed envelope for reply.

CASE RECORDS OF A PSYCHOLOGIST

By Dr. George W. Crane
Psychologist, Northwestern University

Very few baseball players break into the major leagues directly, as did Bob Feller. Similarly few beginning writers should hope to crack the slick paper markets with their first stories. And even Bob Feller worked diligently for a 10 years before he made his first "sale" in the realm of professional sport.

CASE O-167: Fleming J., aged 27, wants to be a fiction writer. "I've sent a few stories off to the Saturday Evening Post," he said, "but they've come back with rejection slips."

"Dr. Crane, is it possible for an outsider to break into the fiction business without a pull?"

"I never went to college, but I think I can write. My friends tell me that my stories are as interesting as those they read in the magazines, but every one of them has been rejected."

"What advice would you offer me? Should I give up this ambition to write stories, and suggest myself to my job as a clerk in the railroad office?"

DIAGNOSIS: Breaking into the topnotch magazines of the slick paper type is seldom accomplished by the beginner. It is possible, however, but not probable.

Reaching the top in the literary field is much like getting into the major leagues of baseball. There, a player usually must be the best of the college team or semi-pro, and even then he comes up via the farm system, where he plays for several years on small city teams.

Too many aspiring writers send off their first stories to the most difficult markets. Saturday Evening Post pays 5-cents per word and up for its material. It is one of the highest paying magazines.

Fleming might fare better at first by directing his efforts toward the markets which pay from 1-cent to 1-cent per word rates. There are over 700 weekly and monthly magazines in this country which are eager to buy good fiction, essays, poetry and novelettes.

How To Sell Your Writings As a rule, don't go to your friends for literary criticism, for they will "yes" you along and be complimentary on general principles. Besides, they often aren't left for a two-weeks vacation. What I want to know is how I should greet him when he gets back from the trip and walks into the office. Should I get up and go forward and offer my hand and say "I'm so glad to see you back, Mr. Edwards?" I remember your saying before that a secretary is sort of like a hostess.

Answer: No, in this case you do not go forward and offer your hand. You remain seated at your desk, smile, and say, "Good morning, Mr. Edwards." If he wants to shake hands with you he will come over and offer his hand to you. If you had been in his employ for a number of years, you would naturally say something about being glad to see him back and hoping he had a pleasant holiday. But since you have been with him such a very short while you should not say anything that has no reference to business. As he takes his place at his desk, you of course go forward, give him his mail and report whatever there is to tell him.

After A Man's Heart

by JEAN RANDALL

No Nurse Wanted
THE famous cartoonist spoke with decision.
"People! I must have people about me. I need to rub shoulders with my fellow men!"
"Yes, darling," his wife agreed absently.

"I see now I wasted months at the ranch. Still, perhaps not wasted. The Cowboy Cartoons—were not exactly a failure." He paused expectantly. He had a child's loveable desire for praise. But since Eleanor, his wife, and Buff, his twenty-year-old daughter, were deep in their own thoughts, he went on, a tinge of reproach in his voice. "Every so often I need to learn the same lesson over again: that the creative artist cannot afford to dissipate his energies." He lighted a cigarette, half closing his eyes against the ascending smoke. "Simply wicked extravagance, my devoting all that time to domestic duties!"

Eleanor started. It was not often that Lance surprised her. She had had many years in which to grow accustomed to the big man's eccentricities and contradictions. "Domestic duties. Lance! In heaven's name—"

Buff, leaning against the door-frame, regarded her parents with indulgent amusement. She knew where all this talk was leading. Presently when Lance had aired his theories and her mother had agreed without really hearing them, it would be time for Buff to lay hold of the situation.

"Domestic duties," Lance was saying firmly. "Daily orders to the foreman, instructions to the housekeeper—"

The conjugal worm turned, astonishing himself almost as much as her listeners.

"Lance! Carrol! You never instructed a housekeeper in your life."

I doubt if you so much as remember the name of this one. As for the foreman—"

He ignored the first part of her speech, to pounce triumphantly on the unfinished sentence.

"You'll admit I saw Atkins every morning."

Mrs. Carroll made a desperate snatch at her usual ploy. Lance could argue a bird from the bough, as no one knew better than she, and how he enjoyed it! Useless to point out that Atkins had been his model during the past three months.

"Of course you saw him every day, dear," she said pacifically. "And if you like it here in the hotel, there's no reason why we shouldn't stay on. What about the ranch, in that case? We came away in such a hurry nothing was decided. Shall we put it up for sale, or simply close the house?"

Her husband carefully inspected the end of his cigarette.

"Neither," he said pudgily. "We'll let Atkins carry on—for this year at least. Able man, Atkins! And Mrs. Webb—she's a lovely humorous glance at his women folk—" is a fairly competent housekeeper."

His chastened wife accepted defeat gracefully. "You always see more than I give you credit for, Lance!"

"Oh, well! The artist's quick perception—but here's this, Eleanor. I'm only the first of September. Too warm to stay here in Chicago. What I plan is—"

"He threw away his cigarette, fitted his finger tips together with an air of having spent hours in anxious consideration of the future—" a motor trip through Canada. The tourists will have gone by now, praise be! We'll jog along in leisurely fashion. . . . The only thing is," he interrupted himself, "it left a lot of stuff at the ranch."

In-Laws Should Not Wear Out Welcome at Newlyweds' Home

BY DOROTHY DIX

Nothing is more common than to hear a prospective bride or bridegroom say, "Well, anyway, I am not marrying Mamie's family, or Tom's family. There speaks the voice of inexperience. For after the ceremony is over they find to their surprise that they are just as much wed to each other's fathers and mothers and sisters and brothers as they are to each other."

Now sometimes in-laws are curses and sometimes they are blessings. There are trouble-making mothers-in-law who, according to statistics, are first aid to more divorces than all the causes combined. There are basty mothers-in-law who feel that they have a right to run their sons' and daughters' homes and tell their children's husbands and wives where they get off and on. There are mothers-in-law, whose chief indoor sport is picking flaws in their children's husbands and wives and making them dissatisfied with their bargains.

And there are other in-laws who take the boys and girls their children marry into their affections and treat them as if they were their own. There are in-laws who stand ready to help. There are in-laws who buck their own children up to do their duty and are largely responsible for making their daughters good wives and their sons husbands who keep their wives on their knees thanking heaven for their luck in getting them.

But whatever faults or virtues the families of the newlyweds have, there is one trait that they seem to have in common, and that is a mania for visiting their children that amounts to a positive obsession. They are never content to stay at home and apparently it never occurs to them to go anywhere except to Mamie's or Tom's. They are forever popping in—morning, noon and night—without the slightest regard for the convenience of the poor newlyweds. Or how much are running up the grocery bill, or how bitter are the thoughts of Tom at having to sleep on a cot in the bathroom because Mother has flopped down in his bed.

Seemingly it never dawns on the minds of their families that Mamie and Tom got married in order to be able to live by themselves and be alone together, and that they would like to have a little privacy, and their house to themselves without being cluttered up by relatives. One of these poor unfortunate victims of their in-laws sends me this SOS call. He says:

"We have been married about two years and live in a two-room apartment. My wife's people live six miles in the country and her father and sister come in town for work every day and they eat lunch with us. They come so early in the morning that I have to dress in the kitchen and they sit around while we eat breakfast. On Sundays they all descend upon us, so that we never have any of the privacy that one's home should afford in which to rest."

It does not want to be unreasonable or inhospitable and I realize that marriage is a give-and-take proposition, but I think we would have a much better chance at happiness if my wife's family would let us alone a little and understand that it is best for a young married couple to live their own lives in their own home and not be thrown with either of their families too much.

I have not been rude to my wife's people, but I have shown them that I was not overanxious to have them with us all of the time. But they won't take the hint. We are moving soon to a nicer and larger apartment and I am afraid that this is going to make bad matters worse and that her sisters will come to spend their nights and even have their dates at our place. What would you advise me to do?"

Well, I would certainly advise you to move into a smaller instead of a larger apartment, because if you don't your worst fears will be realized. Your in-laws will never go home at all, and it is a cliché that your sisters-in-law and their dates will keep you awake half the night. Furthermore, I would suggest to you that you observe the tactics that women use in defending themselves against their in-laws. You never see a husband's family have the run of the house. Maybe the wife feeds them on cold shoulder is

Here's an Idea from the Long Ago

Dear Miss Dix: I don't hold with what you say about women not having to be called old maids. Marriage is a woman's sphere, and if she doesn't get a husband she feels that she has failed, no matter what else she has accomplished. Speaking for myself, I would marry any kind of a man if he could even gasp out "yes" at the altar just to have MRS. attached to my name. Look at the dignity it gives me. Go into any shop and you may see a quiet-looking spinster asking to have her purchases sent home. The clerk writes "Mrs." and looks up to get the name. The customer says "Miss" Brown, and the clerk rushes to her cheeks at the clerk's contemptuous look. Why? Because she hasn't a husband. VERBUM SAP.

Answer:

Well, doesn't this sound like something that came out of the hair trunk in the attic? It has been years and years and years since I have heard a woman declaring that she would marry any kind of a man just to write MRS. in front of her name. I thought my sex had outgrown that particular bit of ideology.

Of course, time was when a husband was a badge of respectability that a woman had to flaunt in public. But nowadays whether a woman is proud of her husband and honored to bear his name depends on the manner of man he is.

If you think that just being able to put Mrs. before her name confers such a distinction on a woman, how do you account for it that so many of the prominent women call themselves Miss even after they are married?

Keep Your Respectability

Dear Dorothy Dix: I have been married for ten years to a man whom I love dearly and to whom I have been a good wife. I have sacrificed my own wishes to his in everything we have done. I have helped him in his profession. I have made him an attractive and pleasant home. I have kept myself a good-looking, interesting woman. Now I have found out that he has been unfaithful to me and every body has known it but myself. So I have come to the conclusion that if I went out and made the fool out of my husband that he has been making out of me I would, at least have the satisfaction of being even with him, although the thought of doing this repels me. What do you think? GRISELDA.

Answer:

Don't do it. You would get no happiness out of revenging yourself on your husband. It would only make you the more miserable, because if you betray your name he has kept you, you would lose your self-respect. You can live without him and hold up your head and look the world in the face, but you could not live without your own self-respect. The shame of having degraded yourself to his level would kill you.

which must be sorted; sorted and stored. As you say, we came away in a bit of a hurry."

Dosens of Reasons

Eleanor forebore to remind him that the hurry had been of his own making.

"I suppose I'd better—" Buff roused herself. "Not you, dear. I'll go. You know as well as I do that Lance would get himself tied into knots without you." A little frown drew her thick brows together. "I hate to leave you, though. There's quite a bit to be done at the ranch. Do you think you can manage without me for—say, a week? Perhaps ten days?"

"Manage? Manage! My dear child, you talk as if we were infants. Or morons. We've managed without you—"

"When?" his dear child demanded. "I've trailed about with you wherever you've gone—rather to the detriment of my education; formal education, anyhow." She anticipated the protest she saw hovering on her father's lips. "Eleanor's headaches—"

"They're getting better, Buff. You said so yourself. There's no earthly reason—"

There should have been no reason, Buff thought, but there were dozens of them. She thought back to the time when her mother had typhoid fever. The Carrolls were in a small hamlet in Mexico where Lance had gone for "atmosphere." It turned out that the "atmosphere" of buying civilization. The sturdy fourteen-year-old child had taken prompt charge of everything: her badly frightened father, the stupid Mexican cook, the flighty nurse, who was all they could get for a time. . . . The physician had learned to leave directions with Buff, to consult her. She had looked after her parents ever since.

"I can do it easily in two days, Lance, you'll keep well ahead of schedule," Eleanor, you must promise me—"

Even when they had assured and reassured her, she was slightly uneasy. Her mother's headaches—they amounted to a real illness while they lasted; Lance's procrastination, his habit of lavishing time of buying furniture which they would never use, the possibility of his changing his mind about the Canadian trip and substituting something less desirable—Buff sighed. She could not always be on guard, she knew. Some day she would have responsibilities of her own—She always frowned and bit her lip at this point in her musing. Lance and Eleanor would simply be lost without her!

And it was late in the afternoon of that same day when she received the shock which almost sent her mind reeling. She was curled in the deep window of their common sitting room, absorbed in the busy traffic of the street far below. When she heard her parents enter she did not stir, supposing herself to be invisible to them. She forgot the long velvet curtains which had fallen into place behind her.

"Lance"—it was Mrs. Carroll's voice, thoughtful and slightly troubled—"how can we get it over to Buff that—that—"

"That de do not require a nurse!" came the swift pronouncement.

Pleasant Weather Ends With Rain, Cool Temperature

Showers May Stop Tomorrow, Milwaukee Bureau Predicts

Intermittent rain and cooler temperatures today marked the end of the pleasant fall weather that prevailed in Appleton and vicinity the last two weeks.

Starting last evening, the rain pelted through the early morning hours and at 9 o'clock this morning measured .61 of an inch.

Today's temperatures were about 10 degrees below yesterday's readings, the thermometer at the Post-Crescent registering 58 degrees at 1:30 this afternoon, compared with yesterday's high of 69. The low for the 24-hour period ended at 9 o'clock this morning was 51, reported at 7 o'clock.

Rain will continue this afternoon and evening, the Milwaukee bureau predicted, and probably cease some time tomorrow morning.

The damp weather was no surprise to residents of this area, who have been delighted at the sunshine and blue skies in late September and early October, but waited expectantly for the break in "Indian summer."

Milwaukeeans sweltered in sticky humid weather today as the thermometer climbed to 79, equalling an all-time maximum record for Oct. 9 set 33 years ago. The normal temperature for the day in Milwaukee is 54.

San Antonio, Tex., with 93, and Yellowstone, with 76, were the hottest and coldest places respectively in the nation yesterday.

Goff displayed to the committee what he said was Y.C.L. membership under the name of "John Keats" and which bore several autographs. He identified one of them as that of Joseph Curran, head of the National Maritime union (C.I.O.).

Officials of the Dies committee checked their files today to determine whether their office had been burglarized.

Dr. J. B. Matthews, research director, told police yesterday that the committee's room on the fifth floor of the house of representatives office building had been entered and its files searched during the weekend.

A window was broken, he said, and there were footprints on the broad ledge outside. The ledge could have been reached from one of several washrooms, he added.

The committee, investigating un-American activities, made public a purported Communist party report which complained of lack of progress in the CIO locally, but said that "John L. Lewis (CIO president) will not get after our comrades for being Communists."

Chairman Dies (D-Texas) of the committee said that the document was identified by Martin Chaney, secretary of the local Communist party, as part of an official report which he had sent to a body of the party.

Afraid of Green
"The A.F. of L. comrades are afraid to recruit because of William Green (A.F. of L. president)," the report said, adding that "our work among the machinists in the navy yard is at a standstill."

The Dies committee went into secret session today to hear an informed person, said a government employee who had attended meetings of "Communist factions" among employees of several government agencies.

Committee members declined to disclose the witness' name. The informant said the employee, fearing reprisals, had asked that his identity be kept secret.

At a brief open session of the committee before the room was cleared for the closed meeting, Representative Voorhis (D-Calif.), a committee member, asserted for the record that he had "unmistakable evidence" that neither local of a school teachers' union mentioned in the Communist report identified by Chaney and seized by the committee was composed of public school teachers.

The report mentioned activity among school teachers. Voorhis declared that Washington school teachers' local was sponsored a resolution at the 1935 American Federation of Labor convention which called for an investigation of Communist activity among teachers.

Nearly 15 Billion in Taxes Paid During 1938

Chicago — State and federal governments collected $14,811,000,000 in taxes during the fiscal year ending in 1938, the Federation of Tax Administrators reported in an analysis today.

Figures obtained by the federation from the United States treasury department showed $4,745,000,000, or 32 per cent of the taxes, came from levies on property.

The second biggest revenue producer among the 10 major types of taxation, the federation said, was the tax on incomes, totaled $3,242,000,000, 22 per cent of the total yield.

Third, with a yield of $1,500,000,000, was the new tax on payrolls. It represented 10 per cent of all taxes collected in 1938, compared with 5 per cent the preceding fiscal year, the first year of a general pay roll levy.

The federation reported the general and special sales and occupation taxes yielded $3,842,000,000, including $891,000,000 for gasoline taxes.

Navy Patrol Sees Sub Off Florida

Nationality Not Mentioned; Non-American Tankers Also Seen

Washington — (P) — The White House said today that navy patrols had observed a non-American submarine yesterday about 20 miles west of Key West, Fla.

Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, said it possibly was the same boat which was reported Saturday 15 miles off Miami, Fla.

The submarine, Early added, was comparatively small. Also seen in the same vicinity, he said, were two non-American tankers.

He declined to say, however, whether the submarine and the tankers were of the same nationality.

This information is still in the process of being checked," Early asserted.

He made that statement when asked whether other governments and American shipping had been notified of the presence of the under-sea craft.

SEE SUB OFF MAINE
Portland, Maine — (P) — The latest report of a strange submarine in the Gulf of Maine came today from the state's sea and shore fisheries commissioner, Arthur R. Greenleaf.

While five miles off Portland lightship on coastal patrol, Greenleaf said, he and two wardens saw the submersible come within 50 yards of their motor cruiser at 2:40 a. m. (1:40 a. m., C. S. T.) yesterday, start to circle the patrol boat, then speed off to the southeast.

Portland (N. H.) navy yard officials said no American under-sea craft was near the position given, which is 13 miles south of Portland.

Twice before since the war began, fishermen have reported unidentified submarines off the Maine coast.

LaCrosse—(A)—This accident had to happen, sooner or later. Carl Kroessler, 52, of Chicago, was hitch-hiking on a Milwaukee road near here, late Saturday. As a truck came along, he put out his thumb. The truck struck and fractured Kroessler's hand.

MORE THAN HE EXPECTED

Sandusky, Ohio—(A)—Seven-year-old Joseph Esposito saw a magician pull something from a box and was impressed.

He tried the trick himself while on the way home from the theatre, using a red box on a pole. Results came quickly — from the fire department.

State Releases General Property 1940 Tax Figures

Represent Full Market Value of All Taxable Lands in Counties

Post-Crescent Bureau Madison—The new state department of taxation today made public figures on the state assessment of all general property subject to taxation in Wisconsin.

With the value of public utility property exempt as taxed under a special chapter of the statutes, the figures represent the full market value of all taxable property in each county as determined by the tax commission in 1939.

It is the valuation upon which the state's general property tax for forestry purposes is levied, and it is also the value generally adopted by each county board for equalization of the county tax levy, it was explained.

However, the figures do not necessarily equal the local assessments upon which all general property taxes ultimately are based.

In the following tabulation of figures is shown the state assessment of general property for the counties in the northeastern Wisconsin area. The figures show the total assessment of all property in each county, and the percentage of the total which is represented in each county.

County	Total	Pct. of State
Brown	$113,554,680	2.58%
Outagamie	104,624,105	2.38%
Shawano	36,322,190	0.82%
Manitowish	99,332,015	2.27%
Calumet	29,782,809	0.67%
Waupaca	42,632,200	0.97%
Winnebago	114,197,885	2.59%

Mrs. Hulda Mischok

Succumbs at Shawano

Clintonville — Mrs. Hulda Mischok, 90, one of the oldest residents of this community, died at 6 o'clock Saturday evening at Shawano, where she had been confined to a hospital for the last several months. She had been ill for several years while making her home with her granddaughter, Mrs. August Forster, who recently moved to Chicago.

A resident of Clintonville for over fifty years, Mrs. Mischok had spent her early life at New London. She came there at the age of nine with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Trader, who located there in 1859 after emigrating from Germany. For many years Mrs. Mischok lived in Clintonville with her only daughter, Mrs. William Zimmerman, who died about three years ago. Her sole survivors are her granddaughter, Mrs. August Forster, of Chicago and a grandson, Emmo Zimmerman of New York.

The body is at the Heuer funeral home in Clintonville. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Mrs. Henry Brouwers

Dies at Kimberly Home

Kimberly—Mrs. Henry Brouwers, 62, 324 Main street, died unexpectedly at her home about 11 o'clock Saturday morning. She was born in Antwerp, Belgium, July 17, 1877. Mrs. Brouwers, who formerly was Anna Bergheer, was adopted by Dr. and Mrs. Emil F. Williams, Bay Settlement, at the age of two. After a number of years she returned to Belgium where she was married in 1901. Five years later she returned to this country with her

After A Man's Heart

by JEAN RANDALL

"I don't know, Eleanor, I don't know at all, my dear. It's growing on her, too—this overflow of maternity. What I'm afraid of is—"

"Yes, I know. That she'll take it all out on us instead of saving it for its legitimate channels. Buff is a born mother."

The girl sat frozen in her place, too stunned by her mother's first words to realize that she was eavesdropping.

"You are heavenly patient with her, darling," came Lance's admiring voice. "You let her decide the very gown you buy! It's getting a little wearing. But she's such a darling, and she'd be so hurt—"

"Heart-broken," Mrs. Carroll said. "We've all sort of drifted into our present attitude toward one another. She is such a determined little thing, and it's been easier to give into her than to protest. . . . after all, Lance, she's usually right!"

"Who cares? I'd rather be wrong than—"

The epigram he had intended evaded him. He finished lamely: "than forever led around by a twenty-year-old girl." A note of anxiety crept into his voice. "Why doesn't she marry, Eleanor? Nothing wrong with her, is there? She's not pretty exactly, but she's darned attractive. She's clever, too. Why—"

For Her Own Good

The answer came a little forlornly. "It's because of us, Lance. She holds men at arm's length because she doesn't—because she's afraid—"

"I thought so," was the artist's grim comment. Unhappy silence husband and two children. For the last fifteen years she had been a resident of the village.

Survivors are the widower and three children, two sons and one daughter, Mrs. Mary Mahon, Kaukauna, and Frank and Emil, Kimberly, and six grandchildren.

Funeral services will be conducted at 8:30 Tuesday morning at the home and 9 o'clock at the Holy Name church by the Rev. C. B. Vandenberg. Burial will be made in the parish cemetery. Rosary will be recited at the church and at the home 7 o'clock Monday evening. Mrs. Brouwers was a member of the Christian Mother society.

German-American

Leader Declares

Persecution Begun

Milwaukee—The Concord day observance of the German-American Citizens' alliance passed without event yesterday in contrast to previous years when strong picket lines were employed against the alliance by the American League for Peace and Democracy, the communist party and anti-Nazi groups.

Paul Knauer, alliance president, called upon members to stand firmly for their rights as American citizens. He declared sympathy with the fortunes of Germany in the present conflict, and added:

"Our hearts are warm toward the German people."

Knauer said "persecution" of German-Americans had started again and declared the $50,000 bail set for Fritz Kuhn, German-American band leader charged with embezzling his funds, was unconstitutional. He asked alliance members to contribute to a "defense fund" to "help us to victory."

Knauer added that no "persecution" cases have arisen in Milwaukee but that the alliance intends to be ready to protect its members.

claimed them both for a few minutes. "What can we do about it, Eleanor?"

"I've been thinking, Lance. This idea of hers of going to the ranch seems—seems almost providential. I mean—oh, I do hate talking about darling Buff!"

"Go on! It's for Buff's own good."

"Oh, I know it! That's all that makes me consider it for a moment. It's so unkind, so deceitful—"

"What is? You've got some plan in your mind, darling. Out with it!"

"I thought . . . while she's at the ranch we'd start on our motor trip. Without waiting for her, I mean. We'd write her, of course—tell her something came up that hastened our plans—"

"She'd come right after us," Buff's father said.

"No. That's part of the plan; the—almost wicked part of it. We'd tell her we didn't know exactly where we were going; that she'd better stay at the ranch until she heard from us."

"Alone on the ranch?"

"Not alone," Eleanor said indignantly. "She'd have Atkins and Mrs. Webb, just as she'll have them for the week she planned to stay. And you know how safe it is out there, Lance. You remember the road—"

"God knows I do!" he remarked with fervor. "If one can call it a road! It's not likely to tempt any one from the highway who doesn't have urgent business at the end, and no one has business there but Buff herself; Buff and Atkins when he goes into Loveland."

"Well, that's the plan. If we were away from her—a month—"

Lance jumped. "A month! Golly, you have more nerve than I have, Eleanor. A month away from Buff! She'll go into fits of anxiety about us."

"No, she won't, Lance; no, she won't! Because I'll write. We'll both write. Casual letters at first—to say we don't know just how soon, just where we'll be . . . and then a definite one to tell her we think that as long as we've made so much of the trip without her, we'd better meet her in Chicago. She seemed to gain courage with each word she spoke. 'I'll write her frankly that I think we need a little vacation from one another; that all families should separate now and then; that we're her parents, after all, and entirely capable of looking after ourselves.'"

He said dully: "It would be just our luck to have an accident or lose our traveler's checks—"

"You see, Lance—how we depend on her! It isn't fair to Buff, and it's bad for us. The child should have a little freedom. She should begin to realize that—well, that men should figure in her life. Not your friends, not the silly young fellows that are forever hanging about you—oh, I know you can't help it, but they do hang, just the same—but the kind of men she could marry. Business men, Lance, who play tennis and golf, and take two weeks' vacations, and fall in love. . . ."

Her voice trailed off as she went into her bedroom. Her husband followed her. Five minutes later a pale and shaken girl crept across the floor and sought her own room.

Continued tomorrow.

Hollywood—Filmville's underdogs, now completely organized, are on the rampage for higher wages—and Filmville's overlords are frankly worried. Only a few days ago, studio workmen pried a general 10 per cent raise out of the industry's coffers—a raise that was particularly significant since box office turns, thanks to the European war, are at their lowest ebb in years. Key men in the various types of studio work assure me that their campaign is just starting—that this time they are going to "get theirs."

I don't pretend ability to pass on the justice or injustice of their demands. I'm interested in the ironic aspect of the producers' plight. For years, Hollywood's higher-ups have been flaunting their wealth so blatantly, so ostentatiously, that public opinion, which is always a delicate factor in any battle between "labor and capital," is dead against them. In any other industry, Hollywood's lower strata workers would be considered unusually well paid. But here, viewed in the dazzling glare of publicity about this star's diamond and that producer's yacht, the workmen's pay checks shrink into insignificance and seem unjust.

It's small wonder that the electricians, grips, carpenters, etc., in this business are dissatisfied with "better than average" wages. How could they be anything else, when they watch the parade of pomp and circumstance? Not to try to "get theirs" when organization gives them power would be too much of a strain on human nature.

IDOL CHATTER: Looking at the elongated frames of Gary Cooper, Gary Grant, Errol Flynn and the rest, it's hard to credit walls about a "shortage of leading men." Note of optimism: Ray Noble's prediction that jitterbugging is on its last legs. Should war come, you'll be amazed how many of our "young leading men" are over draft age. If M-G-M didn't give

Speaker Says Depressions Tend to Strengthen Nation

ITTING depression periods as eras of sacrifice which tend to make a nation's citizenry stronger and more humanitarian. John Kettenhofen, Green Bay investment banker, reviewed the 13 major depressions through which the United States has gone since 1800, in an address before Holy Name society of Sacred Heart church Sunday morning at the parish hall. He discussed the background for each of these depressions ending with the crash of 1929 and showed that each was preceded by a period of expansion or boom due to inventions of various types of machinery, the discovery of gold or oil, or the advent of war.

Throughout all this, the speaker said, sacrifices have been made and the ideals and traditions of America have been maintained. He contrasted the situation in this country where men lean on the government with the totalitarian states where the government leans on the people. Mr. Kettenhofen stated that when the Church is oppressed, "isms" creep in, but when the Church flourishes idealism and the social and economic laws prevail.

Documents Quoted
Quoting from the Declaration of Independence and the constitutions of the United States and the state of Wisconsin, Andrew W. Parnell, Appleton attorney, pointed out that American citizens enjoy freedom of religion under the laws of the country, in a talk Sunday morning before Holy Name society of St. Joseph's church. Pastors are not selected or dictated to by the government, he said, there is no compulsion of enforced religion, no politics or persecution in religion, and people are free to believe what they wish.

The constitution is founded upon Catholic principles, Mr. Parnell said, adding that individual rights are superior. God-given and inviolable, that there is complete separation of church and state, and that the state recognizes, respects and defends these rights. He quoted from several court decisions which upheld the Constitution in matters which threatened freedom of religion.

In closing Mr. Parnell said that Americans should ever defend the constitution, should preserve the integrity of the courts and should be tolerant and overcome bigotry.

16 New Members
Sixteen new members were received into Holy Name society Sunday morning, and about 350 attended the breakfast meeting. Foolish to Argue That War Is Desired by Capitalists

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York — In all the debate on the Hitler-Stalin revival of the World War nobody has yet pointed out that complete freedom of speech, religion and the press, and certain other luxuries of civilization, are preserved, in peacetime at least, only in capitalistic countries. It does not follow that they are preserved even in peacetime in all capitalistic countries, but it is an important fact that in peace or war they are preserved with the worst ferocity in those countries which have gone bold in one guise or another.

Nevertheless, the Americans sometimes are asked to believe that the world would have nothing to lose but their chains in overthrowing capitalism when the obvious fact is that they would lose every ordinary habitual right. The Russians, of course, never had any rights and therefore may be said to have lost nothing; but the Germans and Italians have been heavy losers and scoff at American freedom only because they were unfit to govern themselves as free people.

In this war the Hitler-Stalin propaganda has it that Germany and Russia are fighting against British and French imperialism, as though imperialism and capitalism were identical or twin evils and as though bolshevism, whether red or brown, cannot be imperialistic. But the only nations in the war which have revealed territorial ambitions are Germany and Russia, and Italy, sitting on the bench, ready to go in on one side or the other, already has made two conquests and advertised an intention to go out for more.

In the face of the facts of life in this country, it is foolish to argue that American capitalists want war or that people who are not consciously capitalistic but just go through life exercising the liberties permitted only under capitalism could improve their condition by overthrowing capitalism. The capitalists saw what happened to the capitalists of Italy and Germany and are as mindful of their own personal human rights as anyone else.

Cause For Apprehension Of American Capitalists

That is why the American capitalists have been so apprehensive about the New Deal. They saw in some phases of the New Deal a resemblance to the method by which Hitler and Mussolini built up local strong-arm bureaus to make and administer law by ear and the creation of a class of wards or dependents of the central government who would keep that government in power and increase its power for the sake of what was in it for them. That might be an attractive proposition to the wards of the administration at the beginning, but, again, it is well to look at the other side, where a glimpse shows that dictators must force their wards into their armies and must make war.

No Democratic capitalist nation has made war in these years since the rise of bolshevism—red, brown, black and yellow. The wars all have been made by the dictatorships and the Russians, who once denounced poor old Chamberlain because he didn't fight in defense of human rights in Czechoslovakia, next denounced him because he did go to Poland's aid in defense of the same rights. Not only that, but imperialistic Russia, which has acknowledged Poland's rights as a nation and dickered for the chance to invade Poland disguised as a friend, seized the opportunity to stab Poland in the back, capture about a third of the country and just about extinguished the feeble independence of the Baltics.

Civil Liberties Would Be Suspended During War

Everybody must realize that if this country should go to war civil liberties would be suspended and that, win or lose, the cost would be so great that capitalism would be unable to pay off and therefore would perish. When capitalism dies, according to the precedents of Russia, Germany and Italy, freedom dies, too. Capitalism may be doomed, anyway, as some of the New Deal appointees have thought, but if so that is to be lamented, because only under capitalism, with all its faults, have the people the rights which to Americans are as natural as breathing.

Theoretically, the communists say some day it will no longer be necessary to rule by dictatorship in Russia. But after 23 years the Russian dictatorship is more ferocious than ever, and one man rules the millions. The communists used to sing a song of derision about capitalism and religion which said,

"Work and pray, live on hope, you'll have pie in the sky when you die."

Well, who are going to have pie in the sky when they die? Is anybody having pie in the sky after 23 years of communism?

COLUMBUS
All school pupils on this continent, and many on other continents, study the life and deeds of Christopher Columbus.
It seems well proved that Norsemen, or Vikings, reached North America almost 500 years before Columbus sailed the Atlantic. Since that is so, the question comes: "Why do we look upon Columbus as so important when he made his discoveries long after Leif Erickson and his men?"

Christopher Columbus (From Capriolo portrait.)

The answer is clear. The Norsemen tried to settle the new land, but failed. Their colonies died out. We are told that Columbus may have learned about the work of the Norsemen, but this never has been proved. It is likely that he knew nothing about it.

Most persons in the time of Columbus believed the earth to be flat, but some scholars had read the words of ancient Greeks, who had given good reasons to believe in the roundness of the earth.

One reason given by the ancient Greeks was this: at the time of an eclipse, the earth's shadow on the moon is of rounded form.

That reason is used as proof to this day. The best proof, however, has come from actual tests. Columbus led the way westward across the Atlantic, and Magellan followed some years later. A number of Magellan's sailors finished a trip clear around the globe.

Columbus gave us our mistaken name for the natives of the new world. Supposing he had reached India, or islands near India, he called the people "Indians." Columbus is one of the famous men in history, but many facts about his life are not certainly known. For example, we are not sure where he was born. A dozen cities and villages in Italy have claimed him as a native son. Genoa perhaps has the best claim, since we know that he spent at least part of his boyhood there.

Another subject in dispute is the year in which Columbus was born. When he crossed the Atlantic in 1492, he probably was not younger than 41 nor older than 46. (For History or Biography section of your scrapbook.)

KONZ HITS HARD AND CENTRAL FUMBLES

APPLETON High school football team got a taste of competition in the lower half of the Fox River Valley conference here Saturday and found it not so tough. In other words, the Terrors grabbed off a 0-0 tie against Sheboygan Central in their third league start next Saturday the squad will be idle. Considering the physical condition of the squad and the fact it had shown nothing in its last two starts, Appleton no doubt felt good about the tie. It held Sheboygan throughout the afternoon for at no time did Central threaten. And the invaders had a big group of boys, a heavier team than Appleton. It must be admitted, however, that its offensive efforts were hardly coordinated, especially backfield play. The Terrors acquired no new injuries and with two weeks in which to work before their next appearance, are pointing for a win over Fond du Lac on Oct. 21 here. They have come a long way since the season opened and with high morale figure they won't get kicked around in every game. If they can get a regular backfield combination and a little blocking, they feel certain they can produce.

Have 3 Chances
Three times Saturday, the Terrors found an opportunity but couldn't make use of it. The first came in the second quarter when Filz ran a punt back 20 yards to his 45. On the first play he tossed a pass to Reider who leaped into the air to snag it and then galloped down the north side of the field. He finally was trapped on the 4-yard line but fumbled and Sheboygan recovered. Had he not fumbled, the play might have been called back because Appleton back's were in motion. However, the play was good for 50 yards and sealed the possibilities.

The other two opportunities came in the fourth period. Burton, who played a nice game at tackle, blocked a Sheboygan fourth down punt on the 38 and it was Appleton's ball on the Sheboygan 25. Three line plays and one attempted pass found Appleton on the Central 18 short of a first down. A few minutes later Filz intercepted a Central pass on the Appleton 45 and returned to the Central 47. He then heaved a pass to Cooper which was good for 23 yards to the Sheboygan 45 but three passes in a row failed and the Terrors again lost the ball on downs.

Sheboygan never crossed midfield under its own power. It was there once or twice because of punt exchanges in which it had the edge or because of recovered fumbles. Each team made three first downs.

Wisconsin Teams Are Trampled in Inter-State Play

Only Whitewater Teachers and Mission House Score Wins

By the Associated Press

IF a sudden demand for sedatives should boost prices in Wisconsin, blame it onto Monday morning headaches in state collegiate football circles. It was one of the darkest weekends in state football history. When all precincts had reported, the showing in nine inter-state games gave Wisconsin only two victories. Whitewater Teachers and little Mission House alone escaped the debacle that sank Marquette, Wisconsin, Beloit, Lawrence, Ripon, Northland and Stout.

One of the bitterest pills any team had to swallow was Beloit's loss to Carleton at Northfield, Minn., 13 to 6. Beloit, which a week before had humbled the University of Chicago, took an early lead on a drive from its own 48-yard line which culminated in a winning fumble and two passes from young to Young and Stephens to Plequin, and on a 61-yard march ended by Sullivan's touchdown plunge.

Equally Bitter
Equally bitter was Lawrence's 33-2 trouncing by Coe at Cedar Rapids, Ia.

Ripon flooded to Knox college at Galesburg, Ill., 19-0. The Redmen lacked a scoring punch and could not keep Jack Rule, Frank Fabbri and Leno Tattino from crossing their goal.

Northland of Ashland went to Houghton, Mich., for a 210 beat-up from Michigan Tech. Tech scored two touchdowns on passes in a game which was a rout. Stephens to Young and Stephens to Plequin, and on a 61-yard march ended by Sullivan's touchdown plunge. Stout lost at Marquette to Wisconsin (Minn.) Teachers 24-7. Stout scored in the first quarter on a plunge by Murdoch which followed Captain Richter's recovery of a fumble. Three touchdowns came from young to Hinkle. But Winona went into the lead on a 30-yard run by Roleffs and an end who picked up a blocked punt, on a pass from E. Spender to Delano, and a five-yard plunge by Duncanson.

Mission House went to Aurora, Ill., for a 6-0 victory over Aurora college. The Muskies scored in the third quarter when Gray won 14 yards around his left end to the one-foot line and De Mott's center-plunged for the touchdown.

Launch Season with Win
Whitewater Teachers launched their season with a 19-0 home victory over Dubuque (Ia.) university. All three Quaker touchdowns came on passes — Farina to Strohecker for 45 yards, Gulian to Strohecker for 25, and Gulian to Mayhew for the conversion.

Milwaukee Teachers initiated a new home field with a 19-0 victory over Plattville Teachers. The two were Southern division Teachers conference champions last year. Bob Eckenroden, veteran Milwaukee half, scored two touchdowns, on a 7-yard off-tackle plunge and on a 10-yard pass from Luther Reagan. Three points came on Ray Krzyska's 28-yard pass from Luther Reagan. Three points came on Ray Krzyska's 28-yard field goal and two on a safety by Dreier, tackle, who blocked a punt by Stewart of Plattville.

Central State Teachers of Stevens Point defeated Oshkosh Teachers at Oshkosh, 17-7. The Pointers scored on a 25-yard field goal by Frisch and two line plunges which brought touchdowns. Klobner, Oshkosh halfback, scored the touchdown which gave his team a temporary 7-3 lead.

Milton won at home from the University of Wisconsin extension of Milwaukee, 4-6-6, in a tri-state conference game. Beebe and Bladhorn scored two touchdowns apiece for Milton.

Northwestern college of Watertown and the Wisconsin School of Mines, Plattville, played a 6-6 tie. Detroit — Walter O. (Spike) Briggs, Jr., one of the most enthusiastic of the many enthusiasts who've seen the Lions in action this year, is holding Briggs Stadium available for the Lions' use for the National Football League championship Dec. 10—just in case.

Vikes Never Have a Chance; Gain 25 Yards From Scrimmage

Special to Post-Crescent
EDAR RAPIDS, IOWA — A Crimson tide swept over the Lawrence Vikings here Saturday as they went down in defeat, 33-2, at the hands of a rejuvenated Coe eleven.

The Kohawks pounded at the Lawrence goal for three touchdowns in the second quarter and added two in the third. The Vikings' two points came on a safety near the end of the game as Moss fumbled a pass from center behind the Coe goal line.

Playing valiantly but without coordinated blocking and missing failure time after time on ground plays, Lawrence took to the air early in the game, throwing 23 passes in all, completing 4. Coe attempted 13, completing 4. Lawrence gained 25-yards from scrimmage, Coe 272.

Ed Cislser, Coe left half back, figured in four of the five touchdowns directly. For the first he caught a "sleeper" pass thrown by Joe Singer from the Lawrence 20. Second, he threw a successful pass to Eislager, Coe end, who crossed wide open from the 15. Another pass combination, Johnson to Singer, brought the third Coe tally and Cislser himself plunged over left tackle from the 1 for the fourth midway in the third quarter. As the third quarter ended, Cislser duplicated this effort, leaving the score Coe 33, Lawrence 0.

Stewart and Nyström both did their share for the Lawrence line on defense. Both intercepted Coe passes. The ball carrying duties fell heavily on Nencki and Buesing with Kaemmer shouldering a good share.

Besides Cislser, Walt Kinch and Don Dunlop lotted the ball for Coe while Eislager, pass snatching end, and Hass starred in the Kohawk line.

Kimberly Midgets Beat Kaukauna 11

Score 20 to 6 Victory Before 400 Fans Sunday Afternoon

Kimberly — This Papermaker hamlet likes its football, as was again shown Sunday afternoon when a crowd of about 400 fans saw Father Hietpas' Midget gridders defeat Father Drexler's St. Mary's squad of Kaukauna by a score of 20 to 6. Kimberly scored early in the first period when left half Frassetto curled his right end to score. Van Hout converted. Midgets scored in the second quarter, with the ball on St. Mary's 15, Vander Heuvel broke through left tackle to score, the half ending in the Midgets favor, 13 to 0.

Kaukauna scored early in the third period when Van De Loet shot a nice pass to Keefel on their own 35, with Keefe scampering over for a touchdown. A running play for the extra point was snared.

The Midgets scored again in the final period on passes. Vanden Heuvel to Keyers that put the ball on the visitors' two yard line. Van Hout scored the touchdown on a delayed back through center and Vanden Heuvel passed to D. Garfney for the conversion.

Two minutes before the half ended Tommy Thompson, ex-Tulsa university, flipped a short pass to Peterson, West Virginia Wesleyan star, for a touchdown. Peterson converted with four minutes of the last quarter left. Mike Sebastian, the second touchdown, Elder converted.

Vince Gavre, 1938 university of Wisconsin quarterback, made his pro bow with the Cardinals and gave a smart performance. Obbie Novakowski, ex-Lawrence ace, was an offensive mainstay. His punting, and a 70-yard boot by Eddie Hartnek, were features.

Blocked Kick for Point Is Costly; St. Mary's Loses

Menasha Catholics Bow To Madison Edgewood By 7 to 6 Score

MADISON — St. Mary's of Menasha unloaded a desperate second half pass attack here Sunday afternoon that brought a touchdown late in the last quarter, but its try for the extra point was blocked and Edgewood of Madison eked out a 7-6 victory.

St. Mary's tried 22 passes during the game, completed 11 for 239 yards and had four intercepted. Each of the interceptions came at opportune spots for the Madison club.

Edgewood started the scoring with a touchdown in the second quarter. Myron Brockman broke loose at right tackle and lateraled to Dave Heilman, tackle, as he was tackled. Heilman ran the rest of the way without trouble. The play covered 60 yards. Brockman placekicked the point.

Edgewood held St. Mary's for downs on the one foot line in the second quarter, but Menasha scored the next time it got within the 10-yard line.

The march covered 92 yards. Brockman punted out on the eight. Vern Coopman passed to Farnum Johnson on a sleeper play for 36 yards, to Resch for 10 after a penalty had set St. Mary's back five to Resch who lateraled to Johnson for 32 more yards and a first down on the 17, to Risch who lateraled to Jerome Lingmofski for a first down on the three. Bob Riechl plunged for the score on the next play. Dick Sweeney blocked Jerome Lingmofski's try for point. Edgewood gained 261 yards with its running attack. St. Mary's had a 14-9 edge in first downs.

St. John Squad Bows To Racine Gridders

Little Chute — St. John gridders lost a 27 to 0 decision to St. Catherine High school of Racine, at the latter field Saturday afternoon. The locals were handicapped with the loss of three regular backs due to injuries. Butch Van Grinsven, at the fullback position, played a bangup game, as did Jimmy Koehn. The team was outplayed and outwitted but showed a fighting spirit which was a credit to them against a larger school.

Al Boots hammered at the Marine line most of the afternoon and plunged for a marker at the start of the final period, culminating a 60-yard march.

Rally to Defeat Seymour, 4-3, in 3rd Tilt of Series

Weisgerber Jolted From Mound; Tomlin Banished by the Umpire

BY JIM BOHR

CLINTONVILLE — The echoes of yesterday will linger long in the memories of Clintonville baseball fans for their famous Trucker nine successfully staved off an invading Seymour team's 3-run lead in the early stages of the game to win out 4 to 3. The victory brought to Clintonville its fourth straight pennant, its second flag in two years in the Northern State league. The previous championships came in 1936 and 1937 in the Wolf River Valley league.

The Truckers had to wait until the last game of the season before they finally achieved their goal for the year, knocking out of the box Dick Weisgerber, Seymour pitcher who had the Indian sign on them all season. Weisgerber was forced to retire in the seventh frame and was charged with the defeat inasmuch as the winning run was on first base when he surrendered the mound to Porky Penzenstadler.

Just who was the star for the Truckers is hard to say but Gene Volkman, catcher, drove in the winning run and Sid Felt, who pitched for the last six and two-thirds innings, allowed Seymour only three hits and never was in trouble. John Tomlin started on the mound for Clintonville but in the third inning Tomlin had a misunderstanding with Umpire "Spin" Hooymann, on a play at the plate and after a bit of pushing Tomlin, seeing he was in the wrong, apologized and retired to the dugout.

Won First Round Title
The Clintonville Truckers won the first half of the Northern State league split schedule and tied with Seymour for the second half crown. In a play-off game with Seymour for the second half laurels the Truckers lost. The first game of a three game series to decide the championship was played at Seymour with Seymour winning 4 to 0. Last Sunday the Truckers evened the count with a snappy 2 to 0 victory.

The Truckers spotted Seymour one run in the first frame and two more in the third before really knocking down and hanging up their markers which won the ball game. In the first inning, Porky Penzenstadler, who started the game in left field for Seymour, hit a ground ball to Mallinowski at short who threw over Collins' head at first and Porky went to second. Hammy Powell, shortstop, sacrificed Penzenstadler to third and Nubs Kroenig, second baseman, singled to right scoring Seymour's first run.

It was Penzenstadler who again opened up in the third stanza with a single to center and went to second this time on a passed ball. Powell grounded out to Mallinowski and Kroenig singled to right field. Turn to Page 16

BY BILL DOWLING
SHAWANO For the first time in this decade, Shawano High school's homecoming celebration here Saturday was not capped by a gridiron triumph. The villains who refused to go through the routine procedure of being slapped down were Coach Paul Little's Kaukauna boys, whose 13 to 8 victory practically assured them of retaining the Northeastern Wisconsin conference title they earned last fall.

It was an offensive battle from the start. Time and again the Indians massed their blockers ahead of Billy Reed and Lyle Berton, whose combined effort spilled up

THE STATISTICS
Touchdowns — Alger, Giordana, Reed. Point after touchdown — Giordana. Safety — Shawano. First downs — Kaukauna 12, 11 by rushing, 1 by passing; Shawano 11, all by rushing. Penalties — Kaukauna 3 for 25 yards; Shawano 3 for 25 yards.
Kaukauna gained 171 yards from scrimmage, 153 by rushing and 18 by passing. Shawano gained 239 yards from scrimmage, all by rushing. Kaukauna attempted 4 passes, completed 2 for 18 yards; Shawano attempted 5, completed none. Kaukauna had one pass intercepted. Kaukauna fumbled once, Shawano three times, Kaukauna recovered all but one of Shawano's.

11 first downs. The Kaws, with Karl Giordana in the leading role, rang up 12 first downs.
A Kaukauna line, whose starting rear played most of the afternoon, saved the game in the final minute with a goal line stand. With the ball on the 9-yard line, the result of a desperate march of 60 yards by the Indians, Reed smashed at the Kaw forwards four times. With one down to go the pigskin was on the 1-foot line. With no downs to go it was still there. Big John Wandell refused to move from his tackle post and Reed was stopped.

Intentional Safety
Giordana took the ball for Kaukauna and ran parallel with the goal line until he was expectedly tackled for a safety. Kaukauna then kicked from its 20, Nehls returned 5 for the Indians and the game was over.

The second time they got the ball the Kaws marched 80 yards for the first touchdown of the game, midway in the first quarter. Taking Reed's quick kick on the 20 Danner picked up 7 and Giordana ran to the 35. The Kaws were holding, however, and moved back to the 12. Giordana promptly reeled off 19 yards for first down on the 31. Plunges by Danner and Steffen made it first down on the 42. Kaukauna then varied its attack, Giordana shooting a short pass over the line to Alger, who ran to the 23. Giordana turned the Indian left end to the 12 and Steffen made three more. Alger had no trouble at all grabbing Giordana's lob for the score. Giordana's attempted place kick hit the upright and fell back.

Kaws Check Advances
Shawano took the kickoff and went to the Kaw 19 before a holding penalty interrupted the march. The Kaws punted out, and while the rest of the first half was fought mostly in Kaukauna territory the Kaws braced whenever the Indians got close.

A 26-yard gallop by Reed accounted for the losers' touchdown in the third period. Taking a Kaw punt on the 32, Berton, on the first play, a reverse, went to midfield. Reed tried left end and wasn't stopped until he reached Giordana on the 28. Reed warmed up with 2 yards and then reared for the score around right end. Reed's try for point was low, and the Kaws were tied, 6 to 6. The rest of the quarter was spent in midfield. Kaukauna's decisive touchdown came unexpectedly as the fourth quarter opened. Reed stood on his 20 to punt, but Schweers at center passed the ball over his head. Reed ran back and elected to pick up the ball and run, but in his haste fumbled. This was Captain Leo Wolf's opportunity, and the Kaw center recovered on the 2-yard line. Giordana then drove for the score and kicked the point.

Reed Bears Burden
Led by Reed, who carried the ball on 10 of 10 plays, Shawano then went to the 1-foot line before being stopped. Reed ran five from the 31 and Berton ran five from the 31. Reed scooted around end to the 21. In successive plays the star Indian back made 3, 5, 3, 2 and 4 yards before being stopped.

Bits About Bowling BY DICK DAVIS

WITH MORE AND LARGER LEAGUES pounding the alleys than at any time in the history of Appleton kegling, space has been provided for a weekly bit of babble about bowling. The winter indoor sport is reaching new heights this season and it will be the premise of this column to unearth side-and-highlights that don't appear in regular news stories.

Obviously, it is impossible to get around to all the alleys nightly so we must rely on voluntary offerings. Therefore, much of the success of this venture rests with the individual bowlers and they are invited to contribute any and all information concerning the fortunes, or misfortunes, of their fellow pinsters. Our part will be to sift, check and relay the various happenings to the reader.

The special cooperation of league officials and proprietors of alleys will make it possible to carry a weekly humor list. In this respect, they are requested to write, wire or telephone before Saturday noon of each week the name and scores of those who bowl SCRATCH series of 600 or more and SCRATCH games of 225 or more.

Following is a pretty fair sample of what can be expected, the chips falling where they may:

Pressure upsets many an appreciator and there's nobody who can better testify to that statement than Virginia Bauman, Maritime Tavern keeper in the Women's City League. Last week she was going guns in her second game and showed a neat 111 in the fifth frame. Then something went haywire and she ended the game with a grand total of 149. Funny, but true.

A first class mystery has come to light in the Women's City League. "Dixie" Stark's ball, shoes and bag disappeared about 4 years ago. Last week the ball, shoes and bag turned up in a locker at Arcade alleys. Now "Dixie" finds herself with a difficult puzzle and surplus equipment.

Dave Smith is another who probably would have a thing or two to say about pressure. Recently he started off with five straight strikes, blew the sixth frame and jammed three more strikes. He blew in the tenth frame to total 237, a good game but far short of its possibilities.

Nolan Insurance keglers, entrants in the American division of the Y.M.C.A. league, chalked some sort of a record when they marked seven successive strikes. They turned in a new team series mark of 2,706. Behnke Clothiers of the same circuit let loose with a game of 1,026 which probably will stand for the season.

Speaking of records — Paul Schaefer set one in the Industrial league last week. He "gutted" a 281 series. In his third game he averaged 43 pins per frame. Paul said he was "trying a new system." Monte-Ward of the same circuit also is laying claim to a record. The quints has lost 10 games in a row. If you want to keep the peace, don't mention solis to Wally Horn, a member of the Post Office team and one of Appleton's better bowlers. He maintains he had his quota for the season as he had in games of 122 and 141 en route to 443 series.

William Lawlor did himself proud in Eastern league matches at the Elks alleys when he cleaned three out of four solis. He wound up with a 587 triple. On the other side of the ledger we find Art Mueller bowling for the first time he threw went into the gutter, Art staying on the alley, however. He hit 65, 78 and 88 for a series of well, you can add it up Dr. Archer tried his hand at mapping for the first time in 12 years and earned himself a handicap of 60.

Western League Blues
Now here's a story of woe — Montana hit top team scores. But lost the match to Idaho.

Overheard in the Big Ten league at Elks alleys:
George Ward — "The old three, there, boy."
Oscar Kuntz — "I thought I would carry that five pin out of there."
Forest Johnson — "With that ball and I picked a cherry."
Lou Powers — "Just look at me go!"

Nick Weber — "Give you nine, Herbie."
James Balliet — "Just a little off."

Consistency is a trait foreign to bowlers and here's what I mean —
H. Dachelet of Spilker's Bakery in the Grocers league had 220 in his first game and 140 in his third. George Schuessler of Schuessler Weatherships in the Merchant league started off with a 115 and topped 215 in his third effort. L. Kugler of the same team initiated 212 and ended with a 129. H. Thiel, member of the Merchant league, Wis. Auto Wrecking team, carries a handicap of 31 pins but grooved a scratch game of 220.

And don't forget, bowlers, this column is especially for you so let's keep things rolling.

Chilton High Swaps St. Norbert, 25 to 0

Chilton — Before a record-breaking crowd in the touchdown dedicated grandstand, the Chilton Eluglods swamped the visiting St. Norbert High school team by a score of 25 to 0 with a touchdown in each quarter. The first three were made by Hertel and the fourth by his substitute. Blocked at every turn and with two men injured, St. Norbert made little yardage.

Hertel's first touchdown in the first quarter was made after several successful passes. In the second quarter, Hertel made a 20 yard run for the touchdown after taking the ball from St. Norbert on downs. Kampa kicked the extra point. The score at the end of the first half was 13 to 0 for Chilton. In the third quarter, Hertel went 15 yards for a touchdown after catching a pass thrown by Dohr. In the fourth quarter, Friedrichs, substituting for Hertel, intercepted a pass and ran 40 yards to score. In the third quarter, Hartman of St. Norbert was painfully injured. He suffered a broken bone in leg, cracked knee cap and torn muscles above the knee. He was treated by a Chilton doctor.

EXTRA INNING CONFUSION AS YANKS WHIP REDS

This picture of confusion was home plate at Crosley field, Cincinnati, in the tenth inning of the fourth and final game of the 1939 World Series. The Yankees had just scored three runs on one hit and three errors. Ernie Lombardi, Reds' catcher, is sprawled on the ground, felled when Keller crossed the plate with the second run, and Bill Werber is trying to take control. No. 1 is Frank Crosetti who scored the first run. No. 8 is Bill Dickey, and in front of him is Joe DiMaggio, who scored the third run of the weird inning. The umpire is Babe Pinelli. The "gift" runs gave the Yankees a 7 to 3 win and their fourth consecutive World Championship.

Sacred Heart Squad Bags 5th Straight Win

Sacred Heart Blue Eagles, coached by Ralph Barfell, marched to their fifth victory in a row by trouncing the Catholic All-Stars, 37 to 20, at McKinley field Saturday. Although outweighed at 150 pounds per man, the line and backs gave Gullixson some fine interference to start him on his way. Once in the open the flashy back was hard to stop. Taking the opening kickoff he reversed the field and raced to a touchdown, one of his four on long runs. He heaved two long passes, one to Skall and the other to Brandt for scores.

Hunt for Grid Champion In State of Confusion

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
NEW YORK (AP)—The hunt for a national football champion, ordinarily just getting under way at this stage of the season, has reached a state of confusion comparable only with a National league fan's explanation of the world series.

On a basis of Saturday's disturbing results, the best bet for the 1939 champion seemed to be somewhere in the south, but even there strength appeared to be so well distributed that anything may happen before the end of November.

Such highly-touted outfits as Minnesota, Northwestern, Fordham, and Holy Cross were thoroughly and unexpectedly beaten; Army, Navy and Notre Dame had narrow escapes.

Among those that have displayed real strength are Pitt and Cornell, in the East; Iowa, Ohio State, Nebraska and Oklahoma, in the Midwest; Texas and Texas A&M, in the southwest; Utah in the Rocky Mountains, and U. C. L. A., Southern California and possibly Oregon, on the west coast.

The south, however, offered Duke, North Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi and Mississippi State as candidates for top-ranking with a half-dozen or so others that may emerge. Briefly, here's the situation now:

Pitt Still Tough
East: Pitt, which followed its triumph over Washington with a 20-0 win over its old rival, West Virginia, shapes up as an outstanding forward-passing outfit. The Panthers will entertain Duke, which went to town, 37-0, against crippled Colgate, next Saturday. Cornell, in wallowing Syracuse, 19-6, in its opener, looked a trifle too strong for its "Ivy league" rivals. The Ithacans play Princeton Saturday.

Yale, which tossed a mild surprise into the old-guard ranks by whipping Columbia, 10-7, tackles Penn, 6-0 winner over Lafayette, while the Lions face Army, which barely eked out a 9-6 win over little Centre.

Fordham, brought up short, 7-6, by Alabama, heads an eastern invasion of the south, playing Tulane at New Orleans. Holy Cross, swamped 26-7 by Louisiana State, meets Georgia, 20-0 victim of Furman in a Friday scrap.

Midwest: The headache-producing defeats of Minnesota and Northwestern have left Ohio State, Michigan and Iowa in the Big Ten forefront.

Notre Dame, the great independent, has had two close ones, beat-

Little Chute — Nitingales are perched in first place as the result of a clean sweep of their match with Min and Bill's tavern team in matches rolled at Weyenberg's alleys last week.

Cell Peeters paced the league with a big 546 series while Toots Jansen blasted a 194 game to cop individual game honors. High team score was pegged by the Nitingales with a 734. They also had high team series, 2,145.

Puritans copped the odd game from Look's Meats with G. Kohl topping the winners with a 423 triple and a 178. Maybelle Schomberg held up the Meats with a 447 triple with Harriet Hammen shooting high game of 163.

Main Street Restaurant won two from Ideal Beauty Shop. Toots Jansen paced the winners with a 433 total and a 194 singleton. Edyore Hammen led the losers with 408 series and a 171 game.

Cell Peeters' big 546 series and 186 game encouraged the Nitingales to a three game victory over Min and Bill's squad. Edyore Weyenberg topped the losers with a 408 series and 171 game.

Adler Brau grabbed the odd game from Verkullen's with Belle Versteegen pacing the winners with a 333 triple and 116 game. Kate Weyenberg topped the Furnitures with a 336 total and a 123 game.

Milwaukee — Bob Kennitz, Marquette university's scrappy junior guard from Green Bay, Wis., hadn't missed a placekick after touchdown in practice or in combat until his unfortunate miscue in the last 90 seconds that enabled Wisconsin to beat the Hilltoppers, 14-13. Kennitz had kept intact that record in practice by grabbing the ball on one blocked kick and running it over for the point. Sad to say, Wisconsin scored its vital extra tally in the same fashion after its second touchdown against the Golden Avalanche.

Maul Reds and Trample Ernie Lombardi in The Dust

BY GAYLE TALBOT
CINCINNATI (AP)—The one engraved memory of the 1939 world series ever will be the amazing sight of Ernie Lombardi, Cincinnati's out-size catcher, down and being stomped by relays of Yankees.

Somewhat, the scene is symbolical of the entire series. The New York Hooligans were not content to beat the Reds four straight, first with phenomenal pitching and then with a breath-taking exhibition of hitting, but they had to wind it up by making monkeys out of the National leaguers.

This town has loved the Reds and taken a terrible pride in them all season, but after yesterday's final 7 to 4 beating, after having watched them blow a two-run lead in the ninth, the citizens filed out of Crosley field muttering—"Those bums!"

They were particularly bitter about Lombardi, who probably set an all-time record for clumsiness in a single world series contest. But they also were breathing fire at the mention of Billy Myers, the ill-starred little shortstop who muffed a toss from Lonnie Frey on a perfect double-play ball and set off the Yankee stampede.

Reds Lifted Hopes
What appeared to peeve the locals more than otherwise was the fact the Reds lifted their hopes so high just before the debacle. If the Yankees simply had won the game about 7 to 0 it would have been better. After having watched the McCathymen bomb four homers in Saturday's game they were saying dejectedly:

"Those Yankees, they are too good. But our boys are giving them a fight, eh?"

There was a certain pride in getting licked by such a team. At least, there was no disgrace in bowing to what even the old-timers now admit is the greatest club there ever has been. But for the Reds to prove they were capable of winning a game; to outpitch, outpitch and outfield the champs for eight innings; go into the ninth with the ball game in their pockets and then fall smack to pieces—that made the good burghers plain mad.

As a matter of fact, the Yanks got Lombardi down twice, in the ninth and tenth innings, but it wasn't until the tenth that they began to trample him seriously. Ernie, at 215 pounds, simply isn't cat-like on his feet and was over-matched. It is altogether probable that Willard Hershberger, the Reds other catcher, who is nimble and alert, would have been putting out Yankees at the plate like a man stamping out a grass fire. Also, it is likely he will do most of the catching for the Reds next season.

Nobody would have suspected that the baseball gods had put the whammy on Myers and Ernie when the ninth opened. The Reds were ahead 4 to 2. Bucky Walters was Turn to Page 17

BY ARTHUR BYSTROM
MILWAUKEE—(P)—Green Bay's Packers past-masters in the art of passing, were taught a few new tricks of the trade here yesterday, but they managed to emerge victorious, 27 to 20, in one of the most spectacular professional football battles seen here in many a day.

For the first two periods and through most of the third quarter, it was all Packers. They passed and ran through the Chicago defense almost at will, piling up a 21 to 0 lead. Then the tide turned. The Cardinals found a glaring weakness of the Packers—pass defense—and immediately started to capitalize on it. Frank Patrick, the former Pittsburgh quarterback who helped Marshall Goldberg gain national fame, started heaving the ball to Bill Smith, former U. of Washington end. Twice, late in the third period, they combined to go deep into Packer territory, only to be thwarted.

Players Clash
Then came the fourth period and everything began to happen—from fist fights to touchdowns. The Cardinals pushed across three touchdowns and came very close to knocking the score. The Packers managed to rally and score again, however, and saved the game.

The fourth period was one long to be remembered by the 20,000 who saw the game at state fair park. They saw Clarke Hinkle, the usually brilliant, Packer fullback, ejected from the game because he and Barbartsky, former Fordham tackle, got in a battle that threatened to turn into a free-for-all. Barbartsky also took the long walk to the bench. Schultz, giant tackle, who played at Minnesota and now performs for the Packers, also was thumbed to the side-lines. Spectators were just getting settled comfortably in the first period when the thrills began to unfold before them. Patrick started the action with a punt that sailed more than 80 yards to go out of bounds on the Packer 5-yard line. A line play gained two yards for Green Bay and then the combination of Arnie Herber, and Don Hutson went into action. Arnie faded back almost to the goal line and heaved a pass to Hutson. The fleet Packer end took the ball on the 22 and out-raced the entire Cardinal secondary to score. Tine Engbrengen added the extra point and the Packers were in front 7 to 0.

Isbell Sparks Team
Early in the second quarter Cecil Isbell broke around right end for a 30 yard gallop to the goal line but the play was called back and the Packers penalized 15 for holding. The penalty failed to daunt the Bays. They started in again on a march from their own 40 and did not stop until they had scored. Two passes from Isbell to Lav's gained 32 yards and Isbell raced 12 yards and through a broken field to put it on the four. Laws added three and Hinkle smashed it over from the one. Hinkle added the point and it was 14 to 0.

The Packers started another march in the third period but were checked by a fumble on the 22. Then the Cardinals started to click. Patrick passed to Goldberg for 22 then to Smith for 10. Goldberg broke loose for a first down on the Bay 43 and Faust on a delayed back moved it up to the seven. Here the Packers held on four downs, however, taking the ball on their five. From the five yard line Arny Uram raced around right end and behind perfect blocking ran 95 yards for a touchdown. Reed caught him at the one yard mark but Uram wiggled over for a score. Again Hinkle's kick was good and it was 21 to 0.

Cards Begin to Click
Then the Patrick to Smith combination began to click again. Smith took one toss for 27 yards, another for 10 and a third for 11 before Isbell intercepted a toss on the 17 as the third quarter ended and Robbins took Patrick's place. From his own 40, Robbins faded back and tossed to Smith who ran 60 yards to score. Smith then kicked for the extra point.

The Cardinals got the ball a few minutes later when they recovered a fumble on the Bay 25. Robbins again passed to Smith and it was good for a touchdown. Smith's kick was successful and it was 21 to 14. Hutson increased the Bay lead a few moments later when he intercepted one of Robbins' tosses on the 41 and ran it back to the six. He then took another pass over center from Herber for a touchdown. The extra point kick failed.

The final Cardinal score came after Patrick had passed to Bradette for a first down on the Bay eight. Three plays failed to gain, but a fourth pass, Patrick to Goldberg, connected for a score. The conversion try by a kick failed.

The Cardinals completed 14 of 28 passes for 268 yards, the Packers 6 of 18 for 201. Both teams made 12 first downs. Green Bay gained 440 yards, the Cardinals 300.

GIANTS WIN
Chicago—(P)—The veteran passing battery of Eddie Danowski and Milwaukee—Jackie Driscoll, seven-year old pride and joy of Coach Paddy Driscoll of the Marquette university football team, almost put himself in the family doghouse the other day. Coach Driscoll, motoring through a small Wisconsin town and stopped for speeding, all but had things explained when Jackie piped up: "You see, Daddy, I told you to slow down when you saw that sign!" The cop roared with laughter and let the Driscolls proceed.

Cincinnati—(P)—Gene Thompson came close to pitching a no-hit game for Peoria in 1937. The first batter in the first inning hit a Texas League single, and that was the only blow Gene allowed for the rest of the route.

CONE GAINS FOR WISCONSIN

Halfback Bob Cone of Wisconsin is halted by End Shelby Buck of Texas after a four-yard gain in a game at Madison, Wis. Texas won the intersectional contest by a 17 to 7 score.

Stuhldreher Seeks Spark For Lagging Badgers After 17 to 7 Defeat by Texas

MADISON—(P)—Coach Harry Stuhldreher started looking today for a "pepper box," a player who could put some fire into his listless University of Wisconsin football team.

Lack of such an inspirational leader, poor blocking and all around mistakes were evident at Camp Randall Saturday, when the Badgers were put to rout by Dana X Bible's well balanced Texas Longhorns, dropping a 17 to 7 decision before 25,000 fans.

Stuhldreher threatened to make many changes in his starting lineup before the Badgers take on Indiana in their Big Ten opener here Saturday. Indiana lost a thriller to Iowa, 32 to 29.

Wisconsin came up with a shabby game in defeating Marquette the previous week but Saturday's performance against Texas was of a much poorer caliber and part of the blame was placed on lack of a "spark" player.

Last year Stuhldreher had Howie Weiss, fullback, and John "Blackie" O'Brien, watch charm guard, as sparkplugs. This season no player has shown promise of providing the fire needed to make Wisconsin a winning ball club.

Badgers Outplayed
The Texas eleven outplayed the Badgers most of the game. R. B. Patrick, second string fullback, was instrumental in setting up both Longhorn touchdowns. Gilly Davis, 143 pound fullback, did his share too. His quick kick continually kept the Badgers in hot water.

The Texans had one casualty. Vernon Martin, 19 year old back from Amarillo, was taken to the hospital after the game and remained there when the team entrained.

The Texas team physician, Dr. Joe Gilbert, said Martin had a bleeding kidney and would be under observation for several days. Dr. Gilbert said the injury was not critical but it was serious.

The first Texas touchdown was scored by Davis from the three yard line after Patrick worked the ball down on plunges from Wisconsin's 24 yard stripe. The point try was blocked.

Davis' talented toe was responsible for the first of two safeties. His quick kick rolled to the two yard line. Bob Cone, reserve halfback, tried to skirt right end but the aggressive Longhorn linemen downed him behind the goal.

Three plays after the kickoff, Jack Crain, Texas halfback, raced 37 yards for a touchdown and kicked the point. The final safety came when a bad pass from center rolled into Wisconsin's end zone Tennant, Badger halfback, fell on it.

A fine third string backfield made the lone Wisconsin tally. Tom Faris, quarter; Don Miller and Tennant, halfbacks, and Harold Lubnow, fullback, rumbled the ball to the 13 yard line from where Tennant fired a perfect pass to Miller.

Ward Cuff is operating at the same old stand-as pitcher and catcher for the New York Giants, champions of the National Pro Football league.

This twosome, which had much to do with the Giants' title march last fall, demonstrated again yesterday just how they do it as the Giants cut down the Pittsburgh Pirates, 14 to 7. Cuff scored all the points for the New Yorkers, taking two passes from Danowski for the touchdowns and place-kicking both extra points.

over the goal. Bob Eckl, tackle, kicked the extra point.

Texas had a light backfield but all were well versed in executing delayed end sweeps. Their change of pace was too much for Wisconsin defensive men and time after time they outspurred the Badgers for long gains. Wisconsin's ends were removed from the scene of action by jolting blocks most of the afternoon.

The Badgers counted 8 first downs to 7 for Texas, netting 144 ten more than the winners. Nine of 15 passes were completed by Texas for 32 yards. Wisconsin made 4 of 12 for 44 yards. The Texans averaged 44 yards on 11 punts and Wisconsin had 41.5 in 6 boots. Penalties took 45 yards from the Longhorns and 35 from Wisconsin.

Same Old Story; Yanks Win Series In Four Starts

pitching tight ball after having relieved Paul Derringer the previous inning, and the crowd of nearly 33,000 was going to town. The Yankees had made only three hits, two of them home runs by Charlie Keller and Bill Dickey.

Keller, the rookie batting hero of the series, started the strange string of events by singling to center. Joe DiMaggio scratched a blow to left, but still nobody was much worried. On the next pitch Dickey slapped a roller squarely at Frey—an easy double play. Lonnie flipped it to Myers. Myers dropped it, and the panic was on. Keller scored.

Selkirk flied out, and on the next play Joe Gordon dumped a roller down the third-base line to Bill Werber, who flied it beautifully and pegged to Lombardi in plenty of time to nip DiMaggio at the plate. Ernie dropped it and fell all over the infield as DiMaggio slid across with the tying run.

But that was only the ninth inning, and Lombardi hadn't even begun to suffer. Crossett walked to start the tenth, and was sacrificed to second. Keller grounded to Myers, who pugged the thing like it was red-hot. All hands were safe. Take it away, Lombardi.

Lombardi Goes Down
DiMaggio lined a hit to right, and everybody started running. Ival Goodman, caught up by the epidemic, let it get through him as Crossett scored, but recovered the agile quickly and made a perfect throw to the plate to cut off Keller.

Down went Lombardi, Keller and the ball in a cloud of dust. The ball rolled free. The crowd groaned, and so did Lombardi. DiMaggio circled third about this time, running like a scared rabbit, and headed for the mad scene around home plate.

Sombody managed to warn Lombardi. He grabbed the elusive pellet, dived at DiMaggio, and down he went again. Ernie had been engulfed. The world series was just a painful memory. The only official protest was lodged by Coach Jimmy Wilson in the Reds' funeral clubhouse.

"I don't think that DiMaggio went around the bases at all," he said. "He must have cut across on us."

Billy McKechnie, who now holds the doubtful distinction of being the only manager to lose two world series in consecutive games, had no word of complaint for his downcast and down trodden players. He arranged a hunting trip with Myers for the winter.

The sign on the Reds' bulletin board still said: "Next stop New York. Train leaves Monday at 5:30 p. m."

Portable Radios At Football Games Can't Be Silenced

EVANSTON, Ill.—(P)—A woman sitting next to Clem Costigan, a Bloomington, Ill., insurance man, at the Northwestern-Oklahoma football game, bothered him no end because she tuned in a portable radio, relying on the announcer to tell her what was going on before her eyes.

After the game Costigan registered a protest at the Evanston post-plantation, but was told there was no law against football fans carrying portable radios.

The officers, grinning, suggested he might wear earmuffs. Costigan said he had worn 'em, through nearly the whole game, but they were too darned hot!

to slow down when you saw that sign!" The cop roared with laughter and let the Driscolls proceed.

8 Big Ten Teams Get Into Title Race This Week
Illinois, Chicago to Meet Intersectional Opponents

CHICAGO—(P)—Eight Big Ten football teams jump into the title scramble this week while the other two, Illinois and Chicago, meet formidable intersectional opponents.

The week's games should furnish a good gauge of what is to come later in the battle for the championship now held by Minnesota's Gophers. Every team rated any sort of chance at top honors faced a conference foe, Purdue meeting Minnesota at Minneapolis, Indiana playing Wisconsin at Madison, Northwestern engaging Ohio State at Columbus and Iowa battling Michigan at Ann Arbor. Chicago entertains Harvard on the midway and Illinois goes to Los Angeles to take on Southern California.

Purdue had an open date Saturday while Minnesota was taking a beating at the hands of Nebraska, 6-0. The Cornhuskers, who tied Indiana a week ago, battered the sieve-like Gopher line and rammed across the same reverse play that gave them a tie with the Hoosiers.

Rout Northwestern
Even more amazing than this development, however, was Northwestern's fall before Oklahoma, 23 to 0, worst defeat for the Wildcats in 15 years. Northwestern's erratic performance showed Lynn Waldorf's team will have to hit the upgrade quickly or suffer the same fate at the hands of Ohio State. The Buckeyes opened their season with a satisfactory 19-0 drubbing of Missouri, their defense keeping passer Bill Christman in check all the way.

Iowa became the first team to win a conference game when the Hawks outscored Indiana, 32 to 29, in the wildest scoring exhibition of the day. Nile Kinnick connected with three touchdown passes to Erwin Prasse and scored another himself. Kinnick has scored 31 points in Iowa's first two games. Michigan prepared for Iowa's invasion by trampling Michigan State, 25 to 13, with Tom Harmon and Forest Evashevski leading the bombardment.

To make last Saturday even more dismal for the Big Ten, Dana Bible's young University of Texas eleven gave Wisconsin a grid lesson, 17 to 7, indicating that Badgers will have their hands full when they engage Indiana this weekend.

Chicago got into the victory column with a 12-2 decision over Wabash and Illinois had an open date preparing for its encounter with Southern California.

Big Ten teams now have played 13 games against non-conference rivals, winning six, losing five and tying two.

Urges Residents To Inspect Homes For Fire Hazards

Fire Chief Asks Cooperation During Fire Prevention Week

Kaukauna — Henry Esler, fire chief today called upon Kaukauna citizens to join with other communities in the observance of fire prevention week, which began yesterday and closes Saturday. Kaukauna has a special interest in fire prevention measures, which have resulted in the city having the second lowest residential rate in Wisconsin. Business properties are individually inspected.

Esler asked that citizens inspect and repair deficiencies about the homes or stores. Fire hazards to be looked out for include defective electrical wiring and appliances, store rooms, bundles of paper and other refuse and the condition of chimneys, stovepipes, heaters and furnaces.

Most of the winter fire calls result from broken chimneys along with a shingle covered roof. Esler pointed out and for this year chimneys should be looked over carefully. Old shingles should be replaced with new, he said.

For its size Kaukauna has one of the most efficient fire fighting departments in the state. Three modern fire trucks and a full time force of nine men are housed in the municipal building.

Herbert Weber will be in charge of the ticket sale, with Lucile Faust handling publicity.

Hegner Describes Propaganda Methods at Holy Name Meeting

Kaukauna — "Communism and Socialism," was the topic of William Hegner, Appleton attorney, as he spoke before the breakfast meeting of Holy Cross Holy Name society yesterday at the church hall. Members of the breakfast committee were Charles Bloch, chairman, Edward Bloch, John Benotich, John Benke, Mike Courtney, Melvin Courtney and Robert Courtney. The chief evil of these systems lay not in their political or economic aspects, Hegner said, but in their existence as a way of life. Communism has grown apace, its membership trebling in the last three years, and its territory growing from nothing 20 years ago to one-sixth of the earth now. Hegner described the propaganda methods of the two isms.

Order of Eastern Star, Odile chapter, sponsored a card party for members and guests Friday evening at Masonic temple. Prizes were won by Mrs. H. G. Brauer, Mrs. Olin G. Dryer and John Van de Loo. Mrs. Willis Miller was general chairman.

Kaukauna Knights of Columbus will meet at 8 o'clock tonight at K. C. club rooms on Wisconsin avenue. Thomas Nolan will speak on his trip to Europe, and plans will be completed for the annual Landmark gay party.

Royal Neighbors of American will hold a public card party at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening at Odd Fellows hall. A business meeting of the camp will be held at 7 o'clock. Members are asked to bring sandwiches for the lunch.

"The Women of Yesterday," will be the topic of Mrs. H. S. Cooke when she addresses the Kaukauna Business and Professional Women's club tonight at Hotel Kaukauna. A 6:30 dinner will precede the program.

Past Noble Grands club will meet Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Earl Alger, Ducharme street. A social will follow the business meeting.

'American Labor' One of New Volumes at Kaukauna Library

Kaukauna — Volumes on economic and personal topics are among the latest additions to the public library shelves, according to Miss Bernice M. Happer, librarian. In the former class are "American Labor," by Harris, called the most complete and authoritative single volume history of American labor from colonial times to the present; "Labor Problems," by Watkins, a revised text long a favorite in colleges, and "Economic Principles and Problems," by Spahr, in which 16 economists write on facts and principles underlying American business.

The Business and Professional Women's club has added five volumes on health and hygiene to the shelves, books approved by the American Library association and American Medical association as authentic books in the field of health. "Take Care of Yourself," by Ephraim; "Health, Hygiene and Hooey," by Bauer, "Man and His Body," by Haggard; "Good House-keeping Marriage Book"; and "The Women Asks the Doctor," are the additions. The volumes explain how to care for minor ailments, give fundamental principles underlying individual health, and build up a skepticism toward "quack" remedies.

"Soaring Wings" Among other books purchased are "Soaring Wings," by Putnam, an informal record of Amelia Earhart's life from childhood days in Kansas
